Men believe in revivals in business, in literature and in art, why not in religion? It is the easiest thing in the world for a man to become so absorbed in business as to neglect his duty to God. A revival calls a halt in his living and turns bim back to the life which he promised in other days to live. There may be a new evangelism today which is different from -Miss Nancy C. Morrow, of Tidioute, that in olden days, and by new evangelism we mean new methods may be used, but it must be distinctly understood that John Siggins, Jr., a rising young at- no new truth is preached. The old story of a crucified Savior for a lost and ruined race will never lose its power. There is evidently a world-wide revival on today, the bour has struck and the world is moving with mighty rapidity along evangelistic lines. England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, America, and many foreign lands have witnessed and are witnessing sweeping revivals of the old-fashioned sort.

"Revivalism may be defined, to my notion, as christianity in earnest," so wrote W. T. Stead, the great English reducing our stock of these articles editor. In America we call it evangelistic work, and the purpose of such effort is to arouse men from apathy and indifference and to compel them to face squarely the thought of time and eternity, that Cards and these are also included they may be ready for both. The teachings of Jesus, the principles of science and the common sense of men all meet in approval of a real revival of religion, which means bad men made good, cruel men more merciful, lazy men industrious, the drunkard made sober, and the selfish man become unselfish. This is the work we are seeing done today where the work is unhindered and where sympathy is bestowed upon the laborer. God is certainly moving in these days. Woe be to that man who attempts to stop the chariot or touch the ark.

But you do not believe in revivals? You do in business, why not in religion? You do not believe in excitement? You do in politics, why not bring some of that Mrs. John Seebeck, at Towanda, Pa. The energy into your religion? You do not believe in stirring the emotions? Why not be honest? You like the theater where the emotions are played upon like a harp in a minstrel's hand. You believe in culture rather than in revivals? Remember you don't cultivate a dead tree. A true revival means a better town, better homes, better lives, better newspapers, better books, better everything.

This article is written in order that your attention may be directed toward the evangelistic effort that is now being put forth by the christian people of Tionesta.
