and How We Sell Them.

We could very easily buy a large mass of cheap clothing, put low prices pense, and not for the price which has on it and make a very handsome profit, as selling truck at honest goods prices is certainly profitable, but very short-sighted for the merchant that intends staying in business.

> But there is more in life than mere money. There is standing, there is self respect, there is reputation. And without them what good is money?

> Our operations we prefer to limit to standard merchandise and less profit, gaining the reputation that all clean merchants strive to attain.

> Maybe we will never become millionaires by giving the best values, but a million has never been necessary to our happiness in the past.
