—The 25 or 30 young people who have spent the past two weeks in a most delightful outing on the island below Dawson station, broke camp Monday and returned to their homes. They called their place "Camp Tionesta," and a prettier spot for such an outing could scarcely be found on the beautiful Allegheny. Every minute of the time was enjoyed to the fullest extent if we take the word of the young folks for it, and in future years they will look back upon this occasion no doubt as one of the pleasantest of their lives. They rounded out their two weeks of pleasure with a dance in the Board's hall on Monday night.
—Samuel Cowan, our expert harness maker, is in possession of a live bird which is now a rather uncommon sight in this latitude, where the species was once quite common. It is an American goshawk, or blue hawk as it is best known to hunters and old inhabitants. They are said to be the fiercest of all the hawk families, and very predatory in their habits, chickens being their most delicious tidbit, and they don't object to swooping right down on the barnyard and picking out the fattest and best. This bird which was caught in a steel trap on George Burbenn's farm, German Hill, is a handsome specimen, measuring about two feet in length, with a spread of wings of nearly 4 feet.
—Former Sheriff McElhinney was a business visitor in Tionesta yesterday. He says the grass is a foot high in the sidewalk leading up to the main entrance of the court house. A county official told him that official business was dead there. There hadn't been a prisoner in the county jail for months and the sheriff was compelled to work out by the day in order to make a living.—Franklin News.
—We fear the ex-Sheriff is so accustomed to letting the grass grow under his feet that he is able to see it where others cannot. No more beautifully kept public grounds are to be seen anywhere in the state than those surrounding the Forest county court house. But the last sentence of the News' paragraph comes mighty near the truth.
—J. S. Caldwell, of Byromtown, was attending to business at the county seat last Friday, and meeting a number of old friends. "Jack" is perhaps the youngest "old veteran" in Pennsylvania, at least the National Tribune, which is making an investigation into these matters, has failed to find a man, up to this date, who enlisted in Pennsylvania "to carry a gun," younger than he. There are others, no doubt, who were in the service as drummer boys' etc., but our friend took his place in the ranks, shouldered a musket and was at the front till the end of his enlistment. Jack was born at Mill Hill, Center county, April 27, 1840, and was mustered into the service September 5, 1864, being aged a trifle less than 15 years and 5 months, and if this record can be beaten by any Pennsylvania soldier he'd like to hear about it.
—A miniature cyclone struck this county in the vicinity of Trunkerville about 6:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon of last week and ravaged a section of the country five miles long by about a half mile wide. Chestnut and other hard wood trees two or three feet through at the butt were torn up and yards of soil in which the roots were fastened were torn out with them. There were more than 100 of the big trees down in and within a radius of a half mile of Trunkerville. Several of these fell upon the siding of the P. R. R. and it was necessary to send choppers to lop off the branches which obstructed the main track, to permit the trains to go through. One big tree fell across the roof of the newly erected store of Samuel Tucker, smashing in the roof supports. Some of the islands in that neighborhood were swept clear of the standing timber. The path of the storm was about five miles in length by a half mile wide, and little rain or lightning accompanied the wind, which is said to have been higher than the old timers can recall.
—It is a well-known fact in the oil region that more sudden deaths by nitroglycerine are caused by leaky cans than in any other way, says the Franklin News. It was this knowledge that caused William Bowers, a Rouseville shooter, to blow up his wagon last Monday at Oleopolis. He had received orders to put in a 50-quart shot of nitroglycerine in the Trax well and arrived on the job early in the morning. When he unloaded he discovered that one of the gallon cans filled with high explosive had sprung a leak and most of the contents had seeped into the bottom of the wagon. William took out the good cans, filled the shell with their contents, successfully shot the well, and then turned his attention to the damaged one. The team was removed far enough away to prevent any harm coming to them and then the shooter put a capped fuse into the leaking can, without removing it from the wagon, lighted the same and blew the wagon to atoms. It was the only thing to do. One drop of the deadly explosive between the springs of the wagon or on the hub, if set off by a jar, would be sufficient to explode an entire wagon load of the stuff. As nearly all of the eight quarts it had contained had escaped before the leak was discovered, it is reasonable to suppose that Mr. Bowers drove for miles with instant annihilation threatening him, unconscious of his danger, and his life was only spared through one of those peculiar pranks that this high explosive, so familiar in the oil country, frequently plays.

Stray Shot Kills Man.
Elmer N. P. Kehr, of Titusville, was accidentally shot and killed by Police-man C. K. Consten of that city about 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The unfortunate victim had charge of an oil lease near the city, and on Saturday Alderman Charles Leibrich issued a warrant for the arrest of a man who was supposed to be on the Kehr lease. This was given to Policeman John Ruppersberger and Cousten and they went out to the lease in an automobile, leaving the machine at the road while they walked through the fields. They were unable to locate the man they wanted and were on their way back to the road when it was suggested they shoot at a stump. Shots were fired by both Ruppersberger and Cousten, the latter firing the last shot and missing the target. Just then Kehr staggered out of the brush and exclaimed: "Boys, you shot me; one bullet hit me." The officers took him in their arms and led him to the power house, where he asked for a drink of water and fell to the floor. Cousten remained with him while his companion ran for assistance. Dr. J. H. Hazen soon arrived, but by that time Elmer was dead. The bullet had struck him in the left breast near the nipple and ranging downward had struck his heart. He lived for nearly ten minutes after being wounded.
Kehr was aged 28 years, and leaves his wife and a 2-year-old daughter. He was a man of splendid habits and high standing in the community. The officer responsible for his death is almost distracted.

Gillespie and wife drove to Kellettville Saturday evening.—Twenty-six of the young ladies of Kellettville came up to Porkey Wednesday morning to have a picnic at Mrs. Ed. Gillespie's. The forenoon was spent in visiting and playing ball. Mrs. Gillespie invited a gentleman friend to attend the picnic, he arriving on the 11:20 train. He was met at the train by the young ladies and was conveyed to the lawn in Mr. Gillespie's "automobile," the wheelbarrow. The current or power being turned on too strongly, it was found one of his shoes had been torn off. With the exception of a few bruises Mr. Whitehill escaped any serious injuries. At half past twelve the table was set on the lawn and all were very busy for a short time. The photographer, Mr. Brennan, took a number of pictures. After this being done everybody proceeded to the ball ground where a very interesting game of ball was played between the business ladies and the high school girls. The score stood 12 to 16 in favor of the latter. R. W. Whitehill of Trueman acted as umpire. After the game all returned to the lawn where luncheon was served at four o'clock. After lunch all took their baskets and returned to their homes on the evening train, all very tired.
