How Prisoners Read. "It is rather pathetic," said a prison chaplain, "the way our inmates read their surreptitious newspapers. It is bad for the poor fellows' eyes too. "It is against the rule for them to read in their cells, and in the cell door there are peepholes, to which the jail ers come noiselessly, seeing that all the rules are enforced. "The prisoner who simply must read pastes with a bit of porridge his jour nal up against his cell door beneath the peephole. He sits down on the floor a yard or two away and holds his dustpan in one hand and his brush in the other. In this awkward and wearisome position, his eyes nearly popping out of his head from strain, he reads away for dear life. "And when the jailer's cold, hard eye peers in through the peophole it misses the paper and lights up with some faint approbation at the sight of the prisoner polishing up his floor."-New York Press.

The One Man.

A man who was summoned for beating his wife tried hard to put all the blame upon his mother-in-law and was chided by the bench for his lack of gallantry.

"Why should it always be the fashion for a man to malign his motherin-law?" the magistrate remarked. "Is chivnity quite dead among us? 1 knew a man once who never spoke an unkind word to his mother-in-law, never blamed her in the least for his quar rels with his wife and never had the bad taste to complain about her to other people. Bee Comb. Bee comb or beeswax, the material of which the honey cells in the beelive are composed, is a wax produced by a system of chemistry carried on in the "wax pockets" which are located in the abdomen of all working bees. It is a peculiar substance and is said to be analogous to the fats of higher animals. Originally it was supposed that this wax was taken up in an almost pure state from the flowers by the bees, but experiments carried on by the leading botanists and chemists of the world conclusively prove that the bee is capable of elaborating his pecullar wax, although confined to a diet purely saccharin in its nature.
