-The resumption of the purchase of chestnut wood by the Queen City tannery is proving highly beneficial to a large number of farmers and woodsmet throughout this section. The grade of chestnut accepted by the tannery has no other market value whatever. It consists largely of dead standing timber, fallen timber that has reached a stage where it is useless for any other purpose, and even feace rails are being cut into proper lengths and marketed. Not only is the territory in this vicinity being drained of the product, but this class of timber in adjoining counties is being shipped in here by the carload. For all of this wood the tannery pays a flat price of $4 a cord to be ground into pulp from which tannin is extracted. As a result many thousands of dollars are being paid out in this sec tion. -Titusville Herald.

Tannery at that Place Changes Hands and Expects to Run Full Time.

Advocate of last week:

The following is from the Ridgway

"Harry H, Smith of Ridgway, who has been engaged steadily since he left college four years ago in learning the tanning business at the Eagle Valley tannery in this place, has branched out into busi ness for himself, and on the first of December, he bought the tannery at West Hickory, which is located on the Allegheny Valley division of the P. R. R. in Forest county, and near Endeavor. The tannery was heretofore owned by Martin Lawler of Port Allegany and was operated as an upper leather tannery and extract works. The new firm is composed of Harry H. Smith and his father, Capt. Perry R. Smith, of this place, who is one of the pioneer tanners of Eik county who has for several years past been living on Easy street. The new firm will be known ten-pound son was born the first of last as Harry H. Smith & Co. They will remodel this tannery and turn it into a sole leather tannery for the manufacture of union crop leather. Mr. Smith is a young man of fine ability and considerable energy and force of character, and we predict that he will make an eminent success in his chosen business carreer,' It is claimed on what is considered good authority that the new owners of the town. this well known tannery expect to at once put it in condition to run full time, and that before the winter is over there will be at least a hundred persons employed at the works. If this is the case many new dwellings will have to be provided for the increased number of families that will make their home at West Hickory, and taken altogether to learn that the prospects for getting a slice of the new prosperity plum is bright for our neighbors.

Joe Levi's New Shoe Emporium.

shoe emporium in Oil City took place on Thursday evening last and proved a most decided success, eliciting the interest of a which turned out to witness the grandeur of the occasion. Mr. Levi had sent out a large number of invitations, but had also made it known that those who had been overlooked in the rush need not feel any he-itancy about calling as all would be welcome to call and inspect the beautiful new store room with its gorgeous fixtures and conveniences. Fessenden's orchestra was present and discoursed sweet music during the evening, and every visitor received a pretty souvenir, the ladies being presented with a china plate and the men with a watch fob. The new block is a marvelously beauti ful structure of three stories and a large basement. Its dimensions are 65 feet or Centre and Sycamore streets and 100 feet on Seneca street. Spacious stairways lead to the second floor on both side streets while a large entrance and double show windows on Seneca street add much to the appearance and convenience of the Levi store. Within a few days after the fire of last march destroying the Levi block, the proprietor had given a contract for the erection of this modern structure. thus testifying his faith in the permanence of the city which has been his home for more than 40 years,

Mr. Levi has spared no expense in fitting up his store with the best and latest devices in fixtures. The woodwork is of Flemish oak, done in dark green, the being set off with large mirrors of plate glass. The show cases are of heavy glass, fitted with brackets designed for showing off high grade shoes to their best advantage. Eight heavy oak seats, with high backs and arms for each compartment have been placed through the center of tire width of the room, on Sycamore and Seneca street, above the shelving has been fitted up with Prism glass, producing excellent light effect. Combination gas and electric light fixtures of handsome design serve to set of the store in all its beauty at night. One of the features of the store is the office. The cashier ha been given commodius quarters, with two windows through which to receive the returns from the clerks and transact business with customers.

As has been said, Mr. Levi is to be con gratulated on the completion of his handsome new block, which will stand as enduring evidence of what can be accomplished by persistent work and well directed effort.
