THERE is nothing slow about the manper in which our countrymen are responding to the distress call from stricken Italy, truthfully says the Oil City Blizzard. The outpouring of contributions is fully as spontaneous as at the time of the California earthquake, which demonstrates that when it comes to rendering assistance to suffering humanity all nations look alike to our humanitarians. Suicide of Mrs. Frank Law.

Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Law in Tionesta and vicinity were shocked at the news that Mrs. Law had committed suicide by shooting herself at her home in Pittsburg on Saturday, Dec. 26, 1908. In this community, where the family had formerly resided and were universally respected, many heartfelt regrets were expressed at the tragic affair. For ten years Mrs. Law had been the victim of a homicidal mania, and on two occasions had to be sent to hospitals after causing the death of two babes. On each occasion she recovered her reason and was again united with her family, apparently entirely restored to health. The following account of the distressing affair is culled from the Pittsburg Dispatch of December 27th:

"Ten years of pitiful, shuddering dread in the pretty home of Frank W. Law, a stove manufacturer, of 7600 Kelly street, East End, terminated at noon Saturday when Mr. Law went to Lis wife's room and discovered her dead body upon the floor, a bullet hole in her temple and his own revolver just within the grasp of the limp fingers. For more than a decade Ida Louise Law had been an invalidspecialists had treated her in vain. The shadow of the homicidal malady that had sinted her mind hung always over the home. Twice the specter had gained for the husband and his suffering wife unpleasant notoriety, when two babies had died at the hand of the insane mother. For several days husband and relatives had lived in terror of the end that came Saturday, and a sister of Mrs. Law had ived constantly with the afflicted woman. A little more than 10 years ago, on July 24, 1898, Mrs. Law, in a sudden fit of dementia, killed her son, little Arthur, who was but 18 months old. The family at that time lived on Summer street, Northside. The babe was found dead, his throat cut. Mrs. Law was placed in St. John's hospital, where she remained for a few weeks, being finally discharged as well, On March 17, 1900, little Florence Law, aged 3 months and 11 days, was found at the Kelly street home of the couple dead from strangulation. For this Mrs. Law was sent to Dixmont Asylum, where, after a year she was discharged as cured. For some time past her mind had been failing again, but she begged not to be sent to an asylum. The shot that ended the patient's sufferings was not heard by the husband and other inmates of the house Saturday morning and the ghastly discovery when Law mounted the stairs to bid his wife goodby preparatory to going downtown was the first intimation he had of his bereavement."

Ida Louise Law was aged 44 years and was born and reared in Oil City, her maiden name being Trax. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Eva, and two sons, Clarence and Raymond. Also by several sisters and brothers. During the past summer she and her husband visited Tionesta friends when she seemed in perfect health and fine spirits. Sincere sympathy for the stricken husband and family is expressed by their large circle of acquaintances here.

"Some have urged that we must have another Knox—another great lawyer and mother great orator. Not necessarily, Spooners, Knoxes, Roots, Lodges and Culbersons are few, and that is why they stand out so brilliantly. Besides, it is not essential that one excel in these re-spects in order to make a good Senator. The man of most dominating reconstriction The man of most dominating personality in the Senate today is neither orator nor lawyer. The President is not a lawyer. lawyer. The President is not a lawyer. The late Senator Allison was only an or-dinary lawyer and an ordinary speaker, and yet he was an extraordinarily valu-able Senator. Mark Hanna was not a lawyer and made ho speeches until late in life, but he was a real Senator for all that. As for Mr. Oliver, he was a prac-ticing attorney for 10 years and he is well grounded in the law. He was but 26 and had been at the bar only three years, when he was made solicitor for the Dollar Savings Bank. This was in 1874 when Savings Bank. This was in 1874 when that bank was the largest financial insti-tution in Pittsburgh. The trustees were among the most conservative and sub-stantial men in the city, and the service was of a peculiarly exacting nature re-quiring both skill and discretion. It was the most important general counselorship in that part of the state. Mr. Oliver dis-charged its duties with entire satisfaction and retained the position until he retired from active practice in 1881. The place is now held by Mayor George W. Guthrie. In short you may be sure that Mr. Oliver is lawyer enough to discriminate be tween what is constitutional legislation and class legislation, between meritorious measures and political flubdub. As to speaking, he can take care of himself in the committee room or on his feet. At any rate the criticism we hear most fre-quently of the Senate is that it runs too much to oratory. Often the cry is for fewer speeches and less prolonged discussion, so I fancy one orator more or less will not imperil the nation. Besides, the tendency of all legislation today is to-ward the resultion of business. More ward the regulation of business. More and more each year we are trying to cor-More rect commercial and industrial evils minimize transportation abuses and relieve the distresses of labor by act of Con-gress. What more natural, therefore than for Pennsylvania-a state so intimately concerned in these problems-to increase the leaven of business men in the Senate by sending a business man like Mr. Oli-ver to Washington? We all know that for nearly 30 years he has had to do with the very questions now uppermost in the public mind-as a manufacturer, an employer, a shipper, a transporter, a devel-oper, an investor and as an editor. The experience he has had must prove invaluable when applied to proposed legisla-tion his legal training will keep him on constitutional ground, while the saving common sense which has always charac-terized him will act as a deterrent if railcalism seeks to run rampant in either ex-

"I noted with amusement the remark of one paper that thought a man might be a good father, a kind employer, a respect-ed cilizen, of acknowledged integrity, and also aloyal Republican, these were not sufficient reasons why he should be sent to the United States Senate. Of course not. Still, those are attributes not to be despised even by men who occupy 'the seats of the mighty.' If a man be admirable in his personal relations, if after he has lived for 60 years in the same community he is of good repute for probity and fair dealing, and be notable for the instincts of decency which invariably inspire his attitude toward others, it is rea-sonable to assume that the same rule of conduct will be observed by him as a that actually looks like one.
