DOINGS AT THE STATE CAPITAL.

The introduction of the new school code and of one of at least two of the local option bills certain to appear at this session of the Legislature, were recent features at Harrisburg. The real important legislation, most of which will contemplate the raising of additional revenue for the state, will be introduced shortly. The raising of revenue is about the most perplexing problem with which the lawmakers will have to deal. Not much skill is required to spend state money, but the providing of it without bearing unequally or unfairly upon the revenue raising interests, requires consummate deliberation and careful thought.

Representative A. W. Dennison of Warren county has manifested a disposition to lead the way in preparing revenue legislation. Mr. Dennison is a Republican and is said to have had considerable experience in such work He was at one time a member of the Kansas state senate and is credited with having formulated the revenue laws of that state. He says he finds that the burdens of taxation in Pennsylvania are unequally carried and that to equalize those burdens seems to be a work of greater magnitude than can well be undertaken in the time allowed by a short session of the Legislature. And so it is probable that if the Warren county member goes about his work in a systematic way the fruits of his efforts will not be available before the meeting of the Legislature two years hence.

There is a growing disposition, becoming more apparent every day and in every direction, to devote the revenues of the state exclusively to the caring of the state's charities, the public schools and the construction of good roads. Each session of the Legislature appropriates vast sums of money to hospitals, homes and other institutions scattered over the state which are charitable in their nature, but which are only semi-state institutions and which, in many cases, are merely fads or fancies which should be maintained by the communities in which they are located. It seems certain that within a very short time the townships, boroughs and cities in which hospitals and like institutions are maintained will find it necessary to carry on the work without state aid.

The time is coming fast when the burden of the state so far as charity is concerned will be confined to institutions that are wholly state institutions. It is a fact not generally known that practically all the money now given by the state to institutions classed as charitable is provided by taxing the corporations of the state. Not infrequently one hears protests that the hospitals are being used unfairly in the interest of these corporations, but that argument is usually advanced by those who are not familiar with the raising of the revenues of the state and the providing of the money which is appropriated for charitable and semi-charitable institutions. Of course, the poor must and will be cared for at all times, but if signs count for anything the time is not far off when the state will shift the burden it has been carrying for so many years and which is ever growing larger and heavier.

Discussing the new school code which seems certain of being put in force by the necessary legislation at this session Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, state superintendent of public instruction, says: "Politics did not enter into the commission's deliberations; in fact, it was recognized by every member that the new code should take the schools out of politics. That thought induced us to provide for the appointment of the boards of education in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh by the judges of the courts. There were suggestions that in those cities, as in the other school districts, the boards of education ought to be elective, but experience has shown that when the managers of the schools are elected the result is politics in school affairs and this, in turn, has been bad for the children. Appointment of the members of the boards will prevent the interference of politicians with the schools. It will prevent any assessment of teachers and it will tend in every way to keep the schools apart and allow a higher standard."

Dr. Schaeffer said further that it was the desire of the commission which compiled the code to have it discussed as widely as possible before passage so that any modifications or improvements can be made.

Senator D. S. Walton of Greene county proposes to promote temperance and sobriety by prohibiting treating. A measure he has introduced makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $25 and possibly 30 days in jail, for one fellow to ask the other fellow what he will have. This is termed as "encouraging insobriety and drunkenness." The bill also prohibits a minor from entering a barroom, saloon, brewery, distillery or other place where it is known that intoxicating liquors are made or sold, or to even "linger about such places." The fine in this case is also $25 or 30 days in jail. Senator Walton seems to be in earnest with his anti-treat bill, which has already been read the first time in the Senate. There are many who contend that such legislation if properly safeguarded would go a long way beyond local option in advancing temperance. In the past anti-treating bills have been considered jokes in the Legislature, but the treating habit if suppressed would do much to regulate the liquor traffic and promote temperance.

Titusville, Pa., March 31, 1900.

For twenty years I suffered with bleeding and itching piles, at times was confined to the house for more than a month. Two years ago I began using E. K Thompson's San-Cura Ointment, and one 50-cent bottle made a firm and permanent cure and have not been troubled since. I can freely recommend San-Cura to any suffering humanity.

I am glad to give this testimony and will guarantee a cure if used as directed. I have had perfect health for 8 years.

Introduction of bright crisp Wash Goods here for the first. The showing of our own direct importations of Scotch Zephyr Ginghams one of the most important. It is with a feeling of genuine pride that we point to the fact that this store is progressive enough and has an outlet sufficient to justify us in "bringing out" our own exclusive designs in these finest Scotch Ginghams. The Mysterious Passenger.

The captain of a vessel which was bringing to America in the fall of 1796 a mysterious passenger who had come aboard at Hamburg watched the latter so closely that at last the passenger said one day: "Sir, this is not the first occasion upon which I have observed the attentive scrutiny you bestow upon me. May I inquire the reason?"

"Sir," responded the candid captain, "you took passage on my ship as a Dane. I don't believe you're anything of the kind."

The passenger smiled. The smile was full of perspicacity and confidence and was followed with, "Pray tell me, then, what you believe me to be."

At this question Captain Ewing fidgeted, hesitated and finally blurted out: "Well, to be honest, I think you are a gambler. You've well nigh ruined yourself at home and are now coming to fleece the fools you'll find on shore."

The young man's smile broadened. The next minute he turned grave again, lowered his voice and replied: "Captain Ewing, as you have studied me during this voyage, so I have studied you. I have come to the conclusion that you are a man to be trusted. I am Louis Philippe, duc d'Orleans, eldest son of that Louis Philippe d'Orleans who was slain by the guillotine on the 7th of November, almost three years ago."

Mixed Metaphor.

The late Mr. Ritchie when chancellor of the exchequer once asserted that "the question of moisture in tobacco is a thorny subject and has long been a bone of contention." His immediate successor in office, Austen Chamberlain, remarked at the Liberal Union club's dinner that the harvest which the present government had sown was already coming home to roost.

Sir William Hart-Dyke has two conspicuous "howlers" to his credit—the description of James Lowther as having gone to the very top of the tree and landed a big fish and the comforting assurance that his government had got rid of the barbed wire entanglements and was now in smooth water. Among other political examples of mixed metaphor are the prediction ascribed to a labor member that if we give the house of lords rope enough they will soon fill up the cup of their iniquity and an Irish member's complaint that a certain government department is iron bound in red tape.—London Standard.

A Mighty Rare Autograph.

There are an unlimited number and variety of the genus autograph collector. Some have the grewsome fad of collecting all autographic matter relating to the assassins of our presidents. To be successful even in this limited range requires much careful research and great patience. The more inconspicuous and unknown the subjects chosen the more difficult the task of collecting. It may be said that it is an easier task to secure an authentic autograph of Napoleon Bonaparte or of Cromwell than one of the practically unknown murderer of President McKinley. The very obscurity from which the perpetrator temporarily emerged is hard to penetrate and therefore makes the securing of his autograph a difficult task.—Collector.

A SOLDIER OF 1861-65.

Have Been in Perfect Health 7 Years.

Several years ago I was taken with kidney and bladder disease and suffered terrible pain, besides losing control of the action of my kidneys and bladder. I was given up by the doctors as incurable and fully expected death would relieve my sufferings. A friend recommended Thompson's Barosma and I began taking it. At first I could see little change, but after taking about eight bottles of Barosma I began to get better. I continued to use it and today am entirely cured. I am an old resident of this county and am well known in this section, and consider myself a walking advertisement of your truly wonderful medicine, Thompson's Barosma. NATHAN BURDICK.

Color Gossip.

Have human beings, like animals, a tendency to clothe themselves in colors that reproduce the prevailing tone of their surroundings? There is another question for scientists who have discovered that different colors produce differing effects on the health and disposition of individuals. At all events color conventions in different parts of the world are decidedly at a variance. For example, while we use black in mourning the Chinese wear white gowns, white caps, white shoes and white ties on their cues. The royal color in Europe is purple—a hue of red, not of violet, as often misrepresented. In China the imperial color is yellow, and a certain shade of yellow may not be worn by the common people, but is conferred upon high officials as a great distinction.

Some individual color preferences are historical. Cleopatra loved yellow; Mme. de Pompadour delighted in a charming mixture of pink and blue; Napoleon's first empress, Josephine, wore the daring combination of black, white and emerald green, while Eugene Field boldly declares that—

Any color, so long as it's red,
Is good enough for me.

—Woman's Home Companion.

A Wise Little Milliner.

"If I had insisted," said the milliner, "I could have sold her a hat that cost $10 more, but I was afraid that if she took it I should lose her trade. I knew her husband wouldn't like it. It isn't the expense he would object to, but the hat. She is a countrywoman, and he is a countryman. Countrymen do not like New York hats—that is, hats of the exaggerated type. I never yet sold an extreme style to an out of town woman without losing her custom. The men at home always said, 'Well, if that's the best you can do in New York—come back with a scarecrow thing like that—you'd better buy your hats nearer home.' And thereafter that is just what the women do. That is why I now sell nothing but modest looking hats to country customers. I can't afford to antagonize their husbands."—New York Times.

Poor Angel.

"I wonder," said the sweet young thing, "why a man is always so frightened when he proposes?"

"That," said the chronic bachelor, "is his guardian angel trying to hold him back."
