Announcements.

CONGRESS. ENDEAVOR, PA., Nov. 29th, 1909. MY DEAR EDITOR:—You are hereby authorized to announce my name as a candidate for Congress in the Twenty-Eighth Congressional District of Pennsylvania...

A HUNTINGDON man was recently sent to the penitentiary for two years for stealing three chickens. Figure it out for yourself. One day's work, $1.50, four chickens. Ten minutes work—three chickens—two years in the penitentiary. It pays to be good.

A PETITION is in circulation in Pennsylvania asking the legislature to establish a closed season for muskrats. The reason for this is that in Pennsylvania and Maryland the flesh of the muskrat is esteemed by epicures as the flesh of the 'possum is esteemed in the south. Instead of hunting for rat hides, the marsh sportsmen are now after food that brings a good price in the market.

An old township office in Pennsylvania has been discontinued by legislation. The office of township clerk was abolished by an act of the legislature approved by Governor Stuart May 13, 1909, an action which, it appears, is not yet generally known throughout the state. In consequence of this abolition of the office, those persons who were elected township clerk in many townships at the recent municipal election received an empty honor and will hold no official position.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TODD on Friday advised Governor Stuart that he has authority to appoint a State Treasurer, at the expiration of present State Treasurer Sheatz's term, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of State Treasurer-elect Stober. This will set at rest the question which arose at the time of Mr. Stober's death. Inasmuch as he died after being elected, but before taking the office, it was thought by some that possibly Treasurer Sheatz could retain the position until his successor was elected.

THE first law of nature has blocked the Ohio food probe. The granger element has formed a coalition with the cold storage interests and the appropriation for the proposed investigation has been voted down. The farmers have cause enough to feel bitter, no doubt, but it is necessary that they must foster class feeling by opposing things that make for solidarity in society? The food probe is not directed against the producer, but against the middleman, yet the producer, frightened by the cry for lower prices, lines up with the latter, his natural enemy.

THE Pennsylvania railroad telegraph department is about to inaugurate a series of experiments with wireless telegraphy apparatus to determine its utility and practicability for railroad work. Instruments have been ordered. It is reported that where the experiments will be conducted is not disclosed. It is not thought that wireless telegraphy can be utilized, at least not in its present state of development, for the movement of trains, but if the commercial business of the line could be done with it the wires would be relieved of a burden and left freer by that much of employment by the dispatches.

WE may cry "back to the farm!" until we are hoarse, but the only thing that will entice the surplus population of the cities to the lands will be the multiplication of modern conveniences and labor-saving machinery. When the farmers can sit on a comfortable seat while machines perform all kinds of labor by electrical power; when trolley lines pervade all sections and auto trucks carry produce to market over macadam roads, then will the farm look attractive. That time is rapidly approaching, and those who get to the lands first will be fortunate.—PUNXY SPIRIT.

A Tribute From An Old Friend.

VANVOGHELS, W. VA., Feb. 16, 1910. DEAR EDITOR:—I want to say a word for Hon. N. P. Wheeler. I am not a voter, neither am I a politician, but truth is always good in the right place. I know the Wheeler family. Have been with them not a day, but many days, and I want to say from the little prattling babes up to the head of the family there is an intelligence, a kindness, honesty and an appreciativeness, also a respect for all who deserve it; and respect for their own household and for others the same. My experience in seeing the inside of homes of people has not been limited and I want to say again the Wheeler family is an exceptional family, so much so that words cannot express it. It might be given in rhymes and songs, and as we know, in that loving home some of the rhymes and songs originate. If I was a voter I should be sorry to be away up the Monongahela River. I would wish for a little corner in Forest county so I could put in a vote for the Hon. N. P. Wheeler. I have not seen the family for twelve years or such a matter, but that does not remove from our memory the kind thoughts and best wishes for those who are truly worthy. I do not call myself a writer, but when I saw Mr. Wheeler's reply to Mr. Sibley I wanted to have a few words in the pie, and as I drew my inspiration from the friends I am writing about, I have managed to put together these few lines. I sincerely hope all will be well with Mr. Wheeler. A SINCERE FRIEND.

ONE thing people should be thankful for is that the old style of ruffianism and idiotic horseplay that used to be indulged in by country boys and the inhabitants of small towns when a wedding occurred, is about relegated to limbo. On the night of a wedding, or the succeeding night, or as soon as the mob could locate the newly married couple, they were "serenaded." Revolvers, guns, anvils, dynamite, horse-fiddles, horns, cow-bells, tin pans, and all the hideous noise producing instruments that could be found or devised, were utilized for the occasion, and not infrequently property was destroyed and lives endangered. The old-fashioned country serenade was certainly a terror.—PUNXY SPIRIT.

STRIKE LEADER ARRESTED

Mayor Reybourn Confers With Officers as to Calling Out National Guard.

Philadelphia, Feb. 22.—Clarence O. Pratt, the captain general of the army of carmen who are striking against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, was arrested last night and jailed, charged with conspiracy and holding out.

When Pratt was arrested he was taking dinner in a restaurant on Ninth and Filbert streets with John J. Murphy, president of the Central Labor union; Peter Driscoll, president of the Amalgamated union, the organization that is on strike, and one or two lieutenants.

Pratt has been furnished with an asset he lacked in the strike last summer, namely, the satisfaction of being a martyr. Now that he has been put behind the bars the command of the strikers devolves really upon John J. Murphy, whose importance lies in the fact that he has power to call out from 75,000 to 100,000 labor union men and paralyze every important industry in the city of Philadelphia. What's more, John J. Murphy announced that he is going to issue the call. Director Clay's totally unexpected action has rendered the whole situation more acute. People are afraid that it will have the effect of unifying disgruntled elements among the strikers, and that it may lead to further disorders today, a holiday that sent thousands of men idly upon the streets. The danger which lies in that was exemplified on Sunday, a day of extraordinary violence.

John J. Murphy, Driscoll and others hustled around town trying to get bail, or at least a copy of the charges against their colleague. They received promises of more than enough security, but they were not able to put their fingers upon a copy of the charges. It was plainly indicated by Clay and Tim O'Leary that Pratt would not be released, that he would be held without bail, and that nobody was to be permitted to look at the charges.

"It is time we used the iron hand," said a police official. It looks very much as if the tramp of the Pennsylvania National Guard would be heard in the streets within a day or two.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF MRS. SARAH HUNTER.

BY HERSELF. Statement as to the parentage of Mrs. Sarah Hunter, by Judge John Siggins, of Tidouote, Pa., who is a son of Jane Hunter, intermarried with William Siggins, who was a daughter of Sarah Range, intermarried with William Hunter. I will start out by saying that First Lieutenant John Range was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, being a member of the 5th Company of the 4th Battalion of Militia of York county, Pennsylvania. The record of such service can be found at page 113 of Volume 14 of the Second Series of the Pennsylvania Archives. It is claimed by some of his descendants that he was born in the eastern part of Pennsylvania. John Range was married to Mandline Shollas, who was the daughter of Deabold Shollas, and to that marriage was born Shollas Range, who was killed, when a young man, in a grist mill, by his clothing being caught in the cog wheels of the grist mill; a second son, John Range, Jr., who was born April 8, 1772, and a third son, James Range, who was born October 29, 1782. John Range, Jr. was intermarried to Nance Myers, who was born June 7, 1784, died December 28, 1860, and who was a daughter of Henry Myers. One of the children born to this marriage was Sarah Range, who was afterward intermarried with William Hunter. She was born March 27, 1800, and died March 6, 1878. John Range, Jr. died October 28, 1851. The third son, James Range, was intermarried on October 13, 1835, to Mary Sheltrone, who was born July 25, 1785. James Range died April 20, 1857. JOHN SIGGINS, Historian Range Reunion Association.

INTRODUCTION. I was born in Harford county, Maryland, the 27th day of March, 1800. My first recollection was when I was about four or five years old when my father took me to a meeting; about that time we were having great revivals and the impressions that were made upon my mind have never been forgotten. I remember well the first time I was ever at a funeral. It was when a child was buried. The next day an incident happened which I will narrate, as it shows the impressions that were made upon our youthful minds. Our mother, while at work, cut her toe off and her mother said we must go and bury it. With great care my little brother and I rolled the toe up in cloth and with sorrowful hearts we carefully placed it in the earth.

In 1807 my father took me to Baltimore. The distance was about thirty miles. While there I got some watermelon and enjoyed myself very much. After our return my father made a vendue and sold off his property and we left our old home for a home in the backwoods. There were six of us,—father, mother and four children. It was then we gathered up the few articles of furniture and packed them upon our old wagon and started out for a pioneer life in the wild woods of Pennsylvania. We endured three weeks of tedious travel ere we reached our destined home, which, when reached, was three miles from a cleared field back in the dense forest, in the county of Venango, Richland township, now known as part of Clarion county. It was on the 7th day of October, 1807, that we rested for our journey in the place destined to be our new home. The next in mind was something to shelter us from the weather. Our wagon being a covered wagon we took out the few articles we had taken with us and lived in the wagon until we could build a house. In one week we had a house. It was built of logs and covered with split clapboards. The floor was laid with split logs, the flat surface being laid up. Our bedsteads were made of forked poles set up and small poles laid cross ways. The next was our commencement in life. My father was a poor man, and after our journey and the erection of our cabin, was obliged to sell the old wagon to procure provisions for his family that winter. Our best horse also died a few days after we moved. Although far back in the woods, we were not out of the reach of misfortune. In our new home, away back from all the refinements of those days, we were deprived of the privileges which were enjoyed by many in other places. Preaching did not reach us for four years after our settlement in the woods. Although that was in my childhood days, yet I never forgot my great Creator and often knelt in secret prayer to Him who had so kindly watched over and cared for us and may say in the language of the divine,

"Thy mercy heard my infant prayer, Thy love, with kind fraternal care, Sustained my childish days. Thy goodness watched my reaping youth, And formed my heart to love thy truths, And filled my lips with praise."

In February after 1808 a little incident occurred which I will here relate: My mother was boiling sap and I was sitting under a tree with little brother Henry in my arms; while sitting there a tree fell, striking him from my arms and he was taken up for dead. The next spring my father hired some land and raised some flax, which my mother worked into clothing for the family. In those days the idea of going to the store for the necessary articles of clothing was little thought of. Stores then were not so plenty as now and people who started out for a home in the backwoods had no money to purchase their few articles of clothing at the store, therefore we were obliged to raise and make our own. My father was raised a miller and was always used to working in a grist mill and therefore had much to contend with in trying to work out a home in the woods, which others, who had been used to farming, would not have. He would often come in when chopping and say to mother, "Ma'm, I want you to come and tell me which way this tree is going to fall." That year we raised very good crops, enough to last us through the next winter. Alto that year I had a sister born that I thought a great deal of. I have already told you how we had to do for clothing. The next is what we did for shoes. My mother said it was no shirt to want, so she cut the tops off her father's old boots and took flaps of the old saddle and sent to the shoemaker and borrowed some tools and made herself a pair of shoes.

About this time my grandfather came to visit us and was well pleased with the looks of the country and he concluded he would take his family and settle near us, therefore he moved his family and several other families came with him and in a short time the dark woods began to give way to the axe of the settler and the inventions began to develop themselves. About this time a saw mill was built and we commenced to get boards, which made us quite comfortable. At this time my father bought two cows, paying fifteen dollars for one and sixteen dollars for the other, making quite a difference in the price then to the price now. (To be continued.)

De Sagan's Father Dead. Paris, Feb. 22.—The Duc de Talleyrand of De Sagan, father-in-law of Anna Gomid, formerly the Countess de Castellane, died here this morning. He was 77 years old. He was born on May 16, 1832, at Paris. He was an honorary chevalier of the order of Malta. He had two sons, Helle, Prince De Sagan, who was born in 1859, and who is the husband of the former Countess de Castellane, and Isoson, Count of Perigord, Duc de Valencay, who was born in 1867.

Suffrage Amendment Proposed. Washington, Feb. 22.—The suffragettes won what they consider a notable victory in the senate. A resolution was introduced by Senator Borah of Idaho proposing an amendment to the constitution which guarantees the right to vote to every citizen of the United States without regard to sex.
