This is the verdict of everyone who has ever passed over that gorgeous route.

Attempted Murder and Suicide.
Lynn Hodges, paroled from the Western penitentiary, where he was serving an indeterminate sentence for the attempted murder of his father-in-law, A. P. Anderson, at Youngsville, Pa., last Wednesday at the home of his wife, brutally beat the woman over the head with a heavy cane, rendering her unconscious, and then thinking he had killed her, drank a quantity of carbolic acid from the effects of which he died at 3 o'clock that afternoon. The attempt to murder Anderson was in the spring of 1909 and Hodges then fired a bullet into his own head and was confined to the hospital in Warren for several months before his trial took place. In the penitentiary Hodges was a model prisoner and recently proceedings were instituted for his release. He arrived in Youngsville Wednesday forenoon and started to hunt up his wife. He found her at the home of Anderson and urged her to return to him. This she refused to do and when she turned her back on him, Hodges struck her down, cutting her scalp severely and breaking the cane. Hodges continued to beat her about the head and shoulders until she lay quiet and then he went into an adjoining room and swallowed the acid. The injuries of Mrs. Hodges were at first thought to be fatal, but she is recovering and is entirely out of danger. It is evident that Hodges' intentions were to kill his wife and then take his own life if she refused to again live with him, as upon his person was found a new knife having a five inch sharp pointed blade, which was open ready for immediate use. Mr. Anderson, the victim of Hodges' murderous rage a year ago, has entirely recovered and on Wednesday was at his work at the Forest furniture factory.

Whig Hill.
We are pained to learn of the very serious accident which befell Mrs. Jos. Wortzkey, of our hill, Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Wortzkey were returning from Kelletville and were met by an auto on the narrow, near Newtown. Their horse became frightened and threw both from the buggy, injuring Mrs. Wortzkey very seriously.
Mrs. Wm. Herrington and children returned Thursday from a visit with friends in Sugar Grove, Warren county, and Karlo, Elk county.
Miss Esther Barber is visiting friends at Fagundus.

Mrs. Rachel Barber left Monday for her home in Falls Creek, having spent two months with her son here.
Some of the male population of this place were in Tionesta on Saturday and of a truth girls, the balloon did go up and off.
Rather late, isn't it, for cooling? Say, girls and boys, be careless, for ammunition is plentiful. But it didn't rain and the corn wasn't all hard, either.
Frankie Rudolph has been quite sick, but is much improved at this writing.
The farmers have their fall wheat sown but very little threshing done as yet.

The Odd Fellows' Anniversary.
The sixty-first anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship in Tionesta was celebrated by Tionesta Lodge, No. 369, I. O. O. F., last Saturday, Sept. 10th, when a harvest home basket picnic was held on the court house lawn. The weather was ideal for such an event and a large crowd was in town to assist the brethren of the three links in their celebration. The exercises of the day began at eleven o'clock, when the Youngsville Band arrived. They were met at the train by the members of the lodge and a large number of visitors, a parade being formed which marched up Bridge street to Elm street, then down Elm street and returned to the court house. Dinner was served at twelve o'clock, the visitors taking advantage of the fine lawn to gather in family groups, and from all appearances there was enough for all and to spare. At one o'clock T. F. Ritchey, Esq., called the assemblage to order and announced that the time for the speeches had arrived. Elmer E. Craumer, of Pittsburg, the Grand Master of the order in Pennsylvania, could not be present and his place on the program was ably filled by Rev. W. O. Calhoun, of Tionesta, and Rev. R. A. Buzza, of Meadville. For more than an hour these eloquent dignitaries held the attention of the large audience as they told of what Odd Fellowship in its broadest sense stood for. A history of the local lodge was read by the Secretary, W. H. Hood. It showed a healthy state of growth, and that of the charter members one yet survived, Wm. Hood, of Tionesta. A quartet composed of Messrs. T. F. Ritchey, F. R. Lawson, F. J. Bovard and F. W. Gill sang several songs and after music by the band the audience retired to the ball ground, where the ball game and balloon ascension took place. Both these events were great drawing cards and Prof. Robert Jewell, who made the ascension and parachute drop, gave a fine exhibition. The balloon was sent up from the rear of the grand stand and when at a great height Mr. Jewell cut loose and came gracefully down, dropping into the river on the west side, a short distance above the old gristmill, where he was able to wade to the shore. The balloon came down in the woods just over the point of the hill. All in all the celebration was a grand success and the brethren can look back with pride on every feature of the program.

THE BALL GAME.
Tionesta won the ball game from Kelletville by good battery work and the help of some of our old players, who managed to get back in the game. The pitching of Harry Truman, of Sigel, and the support he received were great stumbling blocks to the visitors, who could not squeeze a man over the home plate, although they had several good opportunities. Evan Morrison, of Marienville, also had something up his sleeve in the pitching line, as the score will show, and it was by no means his fault that his team lost. He is a youngster yet and we predict he will be heard from as a pitcher. The game was a good one all around and the baseball-hungry fans thoroughly enjoyed it. The score:
