Fine Oil Well Near Tylersburg.

Contractor Sam T. Carson, of Tionesta. drilled in a fine oil well last Saturday on the Clarence Potter farm, one mile north of Tylersburg, Clarion county, for a company composed of Nick Hoover and Clare Catlin, of Marienville, Dell White, Phil Eakis, and other Sheffield and Kane parties. The well is 1060 feet deep and after being drilled 12 feet into the fourth sand it filled up 700 feet and made one flow on the ground, the oil running down the hill into the creek. It was then capped in and has made another flow of 25 barrels, but is now shut in and waiting for tankage. From all indications the well will be good for 50 barrels per day and it has created a great deal of excitement in that locality. It opens up a large area, as there are no other developments near it, except on the west, 1,200 feet away. This company had drilled in three producers and one dry hole on the same lease previous to this well. Our informant says the new well is only 125 feet from Nick Hoover's farm and our friend Nick has grown a foot taller,
