October Primaries Too Late.

Speaking on the proposition to change the date for holding primary elections the Punxsutawney Spirit voices our sentiments, and we believe those of ninetenths of the voters in the rural districts, as follows:

Senator Tustin has introduced a bill which provides for the holding of primary elections during the year in which municipal elections are held, in October instead of June. If this bill passes it should at least contain a provisco that the law shall not take effect during the present year. In many counties of the State candidates for county offices have their campaigns well under way, and have already done considerable preliminary work and gone to some expense, that would be rendered nugatory, and it would not be fair to them to postpone the primary until October. Anyhow we doubt the wisdom of placing the primary and general election so close together, for the reason that little bitterness and animosities are invariably aroused in contests for nominations that should have time to heal. Three weeks or a month is not long enough interval between the two elections. Political sores would still be in the acute stage, and might mean disaster for some of the nominees. Time disaster for some of the nominees. Time Ward will take possession of the house is the best emollient. It soothes all pain and look after the interests of the young and heals all wounds. This may not cut much figure in the cities where the people do not get wrought up over primary contests, but it is important in the rural counties. June may be a little too early, but to postpone the primaries until October would be going to the other ex-

An effort is again making in the legis lature to abolish the State police. This wholesome law has been in vogue several years and should remain on the statutes. It has proved a menace to evil-doers only and as a rule the best citizens are strongly in favor of it. The law has been a protection to those communities which would be wholly without any adequate way of You My Wife?" is the most popular book handling the lawless element, and to repeal it at this time, just when it is becom-ing the most effective, would seem al-March 23. As the train went bowling along at a good rate of speed the engineer saw a large boulder that had been loosened on the hillside come rolling toward the roadbed. He applied the emergency brakes and was able to bring the train to a stop before much damage had resulted. As it was two of the steps of the coaches were torn from their fastenings. The passengers alighted and looked on while the obstruction was being removed and congratulated themselves over their good fortune in escaping with life and limb. Railroad travel at this time of the year, when frost is coming out of the ground and the earth is softened by snow, is at any time liable to be interrupted, especially where tracks are laid on roadbeds skirting hills. Fortunately up to this time no serious accidents from slides have occurred in this vicinity.
