Negro Sentenced to Electrocution Slashes His Throat.

Geneseo Courtroom Scene of Desperate Attempt of Convicted Man to End His Life-Prisoner Draws Razor From Handkerchief Before Deputy Sheriffs Could Interfere and Saws Away at His Throat - Other News Items of General Interest.

Jim Williams, a negro, when sentenced to death in Livingston county supreme court at Geneseo Saturday night for the murder of James Duffy of Honeoye Falls leaped from his chair, drew a razor blade from his bandkerchief, and cut his throat before deputies could interfere. There were many youn in the courtroom. Some becam ...ysterical, others fainted and pandemonium ensued.

The deputies, upon seeing the lightning-like move of Williams, jumped forward supposing he was reaching for a heavy tekstand before him with some murderous purpose. The negro, however, dodged backyard, dropped on his back and sawed at his throat with the blade. Before the weapon could be taken from him he was covered with blood.

The hasty examination which followed at the fall showed that he had missed the jugular by but a small margin and he is weak from the loss of blood. If he is in physical condition for the ordeal he will soon be taken to Auburn, where his electrocution is to take place during the week of June

Williams' crime is considered the most brutal in the history of Livingston county. He walked into the Duffy home last February, killed his aged victim with a single blow from a large club and pounded Mrs. Webb, Duffy's sister, into insensibility.

Williams then seized Verona Duffy, 15 years old, and dragged her to the woods nearby. At the edge of the woods, however she escaped, but only after her arm was broken and she had received other injuries.

Sheriff Gooding of Canandaigua, N. Y., made a journey to Bristol, in response to a request from the town board to conduct an investigation into the burning of the Ganyard Hill school house and the subsequent writing of Black Hand letters to prominent citizens who undertook an investigation. The school house burned on May 17, and since that time the alarm has increased until the town board called the bluff of the culprits and asked the sheriff to investigate. It is positively known that the school building was Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 6. - Two mine workers entombed in the Barnum mine of the Pennsylvania Coal company at Pittston for the past two days dug their way out and saved their lives early this morning after a desperate struggle.

They are Kohn Welsh and his laborer, Mike Sobel. They were at work when a mass of rock fell behind them. cutting off their way to the main gangway and the bottom of the shaft. Welsh, a clever miner, saw there was no hope of escaping through the rock, but thought there was a chance by digging from the face of the tunnel to reach the bottom of an old cave hole, which he knew existed there.

From the time he decided until they escaped, the men dug steadily with the exception of a short period, when, being exhausted, they took a rest. There was little food and cold tea in their dinner buckets and this they stretched out as far as it would go. When they got out they had to be carried home, so weak were they. The officials of the mines believed they had been crushed to death by the rock falling upon them.
