WHEN all the women are given the ballot will there also be a Sapphire club?

The Republican State Committee has issued a call for the State Convention to be held in the Majestic Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., Wednesday, May 1, 1912.

WOODROW WILSON says that the silence of contempt will be his answer to the Waterston-Harvey attack. That is just about the attitude of the historic boy who slept upstairs.—Titusville Herald.

EXPRESS charges throughout the United States, says an exchange, are to be materially reduced by the interstate commerce commission as a result of numerous hearings held by Commissioner Lane at New York and other places. An opinion by Mr. Lane in the case was made to the commission the latter part of December in which he attacked the system of express rates as excessive and unreasonably high in nearly every respect. Well, we're waiting to see.

POSTMASTER GENERAL HITCHCOCK has made the announcement that he will recommend to congress that the United States Government acquire all of the telegraph lines of the country to be run by the postoffice department. He has dug up a statute enacted by congress forty or more years ago under which he contends the government can take over the wire service of the country and conduct it as adjunct of the postoffice department. It is estimated unofficially that this gigantic undertaking would cost the United States government somewhere between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000. But it's the proper thing to do.

The Franklin News editor is not a "betting man" but he has this to say, anyhow: "We do not want to bet, but if we had to bet who will be nominated by the Democrats for the coming Presidential campaign, we should wager that none of those now prominently before the public will be given the honor. Wilson was applying for a pension as superannuated before he tried politics; Underwood is from a southern sure-thing state; Champ Clark blundered himself out of the race talking about reciprocity; Harmon is popular neither with capital nor with labor, while Folk and the rest are small fry. The leaders of the party will probably hunt up someone as unknown as was Bryan."

A LARGE number of Mercer women, more or less given to "gab," we should say, are taking an interest in the case of Valke Ankerich, condemned murderer, sentenced to die on the gallows in the Mercer county jail at a date to be named by Governor Tener. The women of the county seat are reported to be anxious to keep the record of the county unblemished as far as hangings are concerned and to this end, it is stated, that they will shortly appeal to Governor Tener and the pardon board to have the sentence of the doomed man commuted to life imprisonment. No concerted action has been taken as yet, it is announced, but there is considerable agitation and some of the women are even visiting the doomed man in his cell and are sending him flowers. It is stated that the women will get busy in the matter just as soon as the date for his execution is set by the governor.

Proposed Tionesta Dam.

The agitation against the construction of a large dam on Tionesta creek grows in volume daily. Nine out of every ten men who have stopped to consider the matter at all deplore the effort to construct such a dam and are willing to exert themselves to prevent it, if possible.

There have been so many terrible disasters from the breaking of this sort of a dam that its construction should not be seriously considered for a moment unless it appeared to be necessary to protect life or property. In the present instance its construction is avowedly a "money making" scheme for a body of private individuals. To jeopardize the lives and property of the citizens of Tionesta, Oil City and Franklin to assist these private individuals to enrich their private fortunes would be reprehensible in the extreme.

Tionesta creek is always the scene of a considerable flood during the spring freshets and the effect that might possibly be caused were a large body of water held back by a dam, and that dam burst, may be readily comprehended by merely referring to the Johnstown tragedy and the more recent one at Austin.

The governor will act upon the petition for this dam on February 1 and all persons interested—and that should mean every citizen of Tionesta, Franklin and Oil City—should protest to the governor against the granting of this charter, and the construction of this dam.—Franklin Herald.

The Franklin News says that within the next week a meeting of the Franklin Board of Trade will be called for the purpose of framing a protest to Governor Tener and the Water Supply Commission against the granting of the charter. The News further says: "It is said to be the intention of the incorporators to construct a dam from 100 to 200 feet high near the mouth of Tionesta creek and transform that fertile valley into a huge lake. It is the belief of those persons who desire a protest to be made that this immense volume of water would constitute a menace to the entire town of Tionesta, all of that portion of Oil City not on the hills, the Ellipse Oil Works and practically all of the First Ward of Franklin, not to mention valuable property between those points. This is a matter that interests every taxpayer in the county, even if he lives miles away from the river," said a well known Franklin man. "If this immense volume of water should come down the river on top of a flood it would sweep away every bridge on the river. To rebuild these bridges would bankrupt the county. In addition to this Oil Creek and French creek would be backed up for miles and untold damage done."

Murder of the Wigton Family, Near Butler, by a Complanter Indian, Sixty-six Years Ago.

Written by F. E. Allison, Nebraska, Pa.

William McClelland, a boy of 12 or 15 years, gives the following account of his capture: "I was coming from home across a field to help Mr. Wigton hoe corn. When I came in sight of the house I saw a roughly dressed stranger leave the road and go out an old by-road leading past Philip Kiestler's. Before I reached the Wigton house I saw Lemuel Dairs and his son come to the house. When I got there they said Mrs. Wigton and all the children were killed. He told me to run to the nearest houses and arouse the neighborhood. I sent boys from every house to spread the news. In less than half an hour there were six or seven men at the house. I told them I had seen a man turning in the Kiestler road and they all started in pursuit. I ran ahead, finding strange looking tracks which the men called moose tracks, and all were sure they were in close pursuit."

Mohawk, on reaching the Kiestler house, saw an old grey haired man standing out on the front porch and as Mohawk turned into the yard he stepped down and picked up a couple of large stones. At this the old gentleman went into the house, shut the door, and walked on through and out at the back door and hurried to the barn. He went into the barn, procured two pitchforks and secreted himself behind the door, determined to assault the Indian in case he followed him. He soon saw a number of men coming along the road and he stepped out in sight. One of the pursuers inquired if he had seen a man passing on the road. He replied that there was an Indian in the house, cautioning them to be careful, as he had at least two good sized stones in his hands when he entered. He was seen by some of his pursuers, passing one of the windows up stairs. At this they entered the house and called to Mohawk to come down but got no response. A Mr. Stanton started up the stairs. When the Indian saw his head he threw one of the stones, grazing his head and knocking off his hat. He retreated down stairs and the pursuers tied some clothes around a stick, drew a coat over them and put a hat on the end of the stick and one of the party started up the stairs. As soon as the hat was in sight Mohawk knocked the hat and stick out of the fellow's hand and seeing he had been fooled stood at the head of the stairs with a chair, which he let go at the first one that put his head in sight. With his fighting material all exhausted they heard him trying to wreek a bedstead to get something for another defense, and a man named Pat McCurdy or McClury, who had picked up a stick on the way, ran up the stairs. As he approached Mohawk had taken a fiddle of the wall and broke it into a score of pieces over McCurdy's head, nothing left but the handle and strings dangling in the air. Pat struck him a blow above the left ear and felled him to the floor. Then catching him by the legs ran down stairs through the house and out into the front yard. His arms were pinioned behind his back.

When recovering from his dazed condition and finding his wrists firmly bound, he looked each of his captors in the face, then giving a stout grunt, attempted to regain his feet. The party then started with Mohawk to the Wigton house. On the way back to the main road there was a muddy place in the road and a path went above it and around a tree. As the two men leading Mohawk came opposite the tree, Wigton, who stood hiding behind unobserved, sprang from the tree and with open knife attempted to stab their prisoner. Mohawk, who saw the danger first, with a loud whoop and jump broke loose. Wigton was taken and disarmed and Mohawk was marched in front of the party to the house of the murdered family and viewed the mother and each of the children. Then arose the question of lynching him on a near by tree but some of the party objected and he was started for the Butler county jail. On the way they met a crowd of ruffians returning from Pittsburgh, who had been informed of the horrible crime, and they proposed lynching him on the spot. A man named John Collingwood, of Rockland, started to a farm house to get a clothesline for a rope. Before he returned John W. Shugart, Sheriff of Venango county, and Deputy Ed. Pierce, rode up. They were in pursuit of some counterfeiters and had heard of the crime and before the return of Collingwood Sheriff Shugart and Deputy Pierce disarmed and took charge of the Indian as their prisoner, putting some boys on their horses. Still the cry of "lynch him" was heard from a majority of the bystanders. Shugart was cool and of the positive make-up that rather deterred the boisterous crowd. As he hurried on toward Butler they saw some horsemen rapidly approaching. It turned out to be Sheriff Jim Campbell, of Butler, who had been notified of the murder and with an armed posse was in pursuit of the prisoner. Mohawk was quickly turned over to Sheriff Campbell, who landed him safely in the county jail. The timely arrival of the Venango sheriff saved Mohawk from being lynched. A number of the ruffians returned with the crowd to the town. The county commissioners agreed to put a guard around the jail until Mohawk was tried. This seemed to quiet the people for a short time, but another uprising occurred in the northern part of the county by the citizens and another lynching party was organized and intended to take him from the authorities and hang him. Sheriff Campbell received notice and Judge McClain, John Negley and other citizens ordered all roads to the jail barricaded. McClain, a retired army officer took charge of the prisoner and buildings. When the lynching party reached the Old Sleepy Tavern, on the Sunbury road, they were met by Judge Bredin, Duffy, and other citizens of Butler, who assured them that Mohawk should be executed according to law, and that the jail had been garrisoned and was in charge of Captain McClain and any attempt at lynching would be met with a determined resistance. A second time the crowd was quieted down and dispersed.

The murder was committed on the 30th day of June, A. D. 1845. The trial began on the 13th day of the following December, with Judge Bredin and Judge John Duffy on the bench. Names of the jury empaneled: Henry Barnhart, Isa Boyer, John Brandon, Robert E. Hays, John Oliver, Robert Lemmon, Robert Hay, Samuel Marshall, William Cunningham, George A. Kilpatrick, John Gilmore, John Cunningham. The trial lasted several days. During the time forty-eight witnesses were examined. Judge Bredin's charge to the jury was brief, cautioning the jury against any prejudice or any public demonstration by the citizens. The verdict of guilty was returned in less than fifty minutes. The death sentence was pronounced by his honor, Judge Bredin, and Governor David R. Porter set March 22, 1844, between the hours of 9 and 12 o'clock, for his execution. His body was put in a rough box and set along side the pavement near the jail and all who wished to see it could do so by walking to the place.

James Wigton never recovered from the nervous shock he received on that fatal day. Some years after he sold his farm and remarried. He raised a family of five boys and a girl to his second wife. In 1882, during the oil excitement, he removed to Oil City and later to Cranberry township. His height was about six feet four inches and weight 190 pounds. He was well informed but after the murder of his first family he seemed estranged in his mind. He and his wife in their last few years resided in the village of Salina, six miles south of Oil City, where they both ended their old days.

Amos L. Cooper, an old time lumberman, while visiting friends here last winter, said when he was a boy ten years old he walked twelve miles to see Mohawk hanged but failed to get there in time.

The several churches refused to allow Mohawk's corpse to be buried in their cemeteries in Butler. It was buried in a secluded spot near where the St. Paul's Orphan Home now stands, called Oakland Place, in the northeastern section of Butler borough. Thus ends the sad history of the Wigton family and Lo, the poor Indian.

Kellettville.

Mr. and Mrs. Neilly and daughter, Miss Neilly, and Mr. and Mrs. Charlson of Warren gave an entertainment in Johnson's hall Tuesday evening, in behalf of "The National Home Guard," which has its headquarters at Warren. J. M. Ault acted as chairman of the evening and delivered a few opening remarks. Rev. W. E. Frampton gave a short talk on protection by insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Neilly sang several numbers, which were well received by the audience. Mrs. Neilly recited a selection and Mr. Neilly, who is the National Secretary, gave the address of the evening, after which a very toothsome lunch was served by the members of the company. A number of policies were written during their stay in town.

Ward Barrett has been home from Hoff's Business College for the past week to recuperate from his recent illness.

J. C. Cummings of Pittsburgh paid our town a flying visit Friday, bringing with him sixty new books for the Co-operative Library he inaugurated in the town some three months ago. He took with him the same number of old books.

Mrs. Nettie Harrington had the misfortune to break through the floor of the porch at the ten cent store Thursday and sustained several painful bruises.

The members of the M. E. church and Sabbath school held their services in Johnson's hall, Sunday. They have not been able to have any service at the church for the past three weeks, as there has been no gas. The trustees have ordered sufficient pipe to reach the Salmon Creek Co.'s line, and it is expected the church will be ready for services again this week.

The Tionesta Dam.

Just before the Austin disaster which wiped out that village, and caused the loss of nearly 100 lives, the citizens of this section, and especially those of Tionesta, were fighting against the proposed grasping of the valley of Tionesta creek and the erection of dams by a Pittsburgh company for water purposes. The affair at Austin was such a horrible example of what might be expected to occur in the Allegheny valley if the schemes of the water company were carried out, and it was such a shock to the people of the whole State that it was supposed to have settled the Tionesta project. Nothing has been heard of it for several months, and it was generally believed to have been abandoned. But it now appears again in the form of an advertisement published in the local papers, giving notice that an application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Water Supply Commission of Pennsylvania, on February 1, for a charter of an intended corporation to be called Tionesta Water Power Company. The persons named as applicants are J. C. Trees, W. B. Beecher, M. L. Benedict, J. R. Rose and F. B. Parriott, and the object is to store, transport and furnish water for manufacturing purposes. These are the same people who were concerned in the project which was ventilated last fall, and the object is the same. The proposition is to build a dam 300 feet high near the mouth of Tionesta creek, and transform that fertile valley into a huge lake, and destroy all its industries. The value of the property which would be wiped out is so enormous, as compared with the proposed income from the scheme, that it would seem there is some object behind it that has not been revealed. But whatever the proposition, the size of the dam necessary to make it a success would be a constant menace to the dwellers in the Allegheny valley for many miles below the mouth of Tionesta creek. Tionesta would be in constant danger of being destroyed; Rockmead would be in the path of such a flood as would follow a break, and the business portion of Oil City and a large residential part of Franklin would in all probability be wiped out. The scheme is a dangerous one, viewed from the point of controlling and changing the flow of the waters from their natural courses, or from the menace of such a body of water hanging over the homes of our citizens.

The time for action is short, as the application is to be made on February 1, and our people should at once bestir themselves in making protest to Governor Tener as well as the Water Supply Commission. The people of Tionesta are preparing and sending in their protests now, and these should be supplemented by those from Oil City, for the danger in the scheme to our town is as great as that to Tionesta. Let there be quick and prompt action by our citizens.—Oil City Derrick.

Mrs. Grant Sutton was a Warren shopper Friday.

Wm. Lawson, who is working at Ault's camp, spent Sunday with his family here.

Mrs. W. S. Cole, who has been sick for some time, is growing weaker all the time. Being quite an aged lady she does not rally and though she does not suffer much, yet her condition is more serious with each succeeding day, and at present she is unable to feed herself. Dr. Willard of Clarion, under whose care she is, gives small hopes of her recovery.

Raymond Christenson is suffering from the effects of typhoid fever, which he had last winter. The little fellow has never been strong since having the fever, but now his condition is becoming serious enough to demand immediate attention. Dr. Hyer is in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnson were Warren visitors Tuesday.

Henry Sutton and Jas. Cousins, who are working in Clarion, spent Sunday at their respective homes, returning to their work on Sunday.

Misses Boss Sigworth and Lillian Shaw gave their schools a sleigh ride Friday evening. With well filled lunch baskets, they left here in the early evening, a goodly sleigh load. Went to Clarion and had a jolly hour at the home of Miss Shaw, where they were warmed and decorated the contents of their lunch baskets and departed again for home, reaching here about eleven o'clock. Henry Sorenson took the load down with his team. A grand time is reported and it is regretted that Miss Bailey, of Vandergrift Corners, was not sufficiently recovered from an attack of neuralgia to accompany them with her pupils.

Martin Christenson, who is working in a grocery store in Warren, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Christenson.

Harry Christenson, of Hart & Henderson's Camp, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Christenson.

"What is Mayburg? Hope not frozen this winter!" We each miss your items. Come, what's been doing the last few weeks?

Miss Clara Bailey returned to her school work Monday, after an enforced week's vacation on account of illness.

Clarence Farnsworth was over from Pine Camp to visit his mother over Sunday.

Henry Deshner of Mayburg visited his wife here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald of Warren were the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Christenson, over Sunday.

Henry Sorenson, who has been visiting in West Virginia, returned home Thursday.

Misses Anna and Elizabeth Aflaire spent Sunday their home here. Their brother, Simon, accompanied them. The three are "keeping house" at Trumans. The "girls" are teaching school and Simon also has employment there, so they are a happy family.

Why Fresh Air?

If you think all the fuss about fresh air is exaggerated try this simple experiment. Light a match. Put it in a bottle and then stop the bottle with a cork. In a few seconds the flame will go out. Why? Because it has used up all the oxygen in the bottle.

Your life might be compared to a fire. Your body produces heat just as a fire does and for the same reason it needs oxygen. Oxygen is taken from the air by the lungs and is distributed through the body by the blood. Every day the lungs of a normal person handle 100 barrels of air. If this air is pure the flame of life will burn brightly. If it is not, you will become sluggish and poor in health.

Don't cork up your home like a bottle. Be sure you are getting yourself plenty of oxygen. Night and day you should have fresh air.—Karl de Schweinitz, Executive Secretary, Pennsylvania Society for the prevention of Tuberculosis.

From a Former Tionesta Boy.

The following letter is from a former resident of whom we have a kindly remembrance as a "devil" in this office in the days of the old hand press:

CHICAGO HERALD, L.L., Jan. 14, 1912.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—Judge Irwin's poem contains a lot of truth and some poetry, but I would like to point out a mistake the boys of 1861 made. Not that I have any personal grudge against our old friend Samuel, although I will own up to throwing stones against the side of his bungalow in my foolish boyhood days just to see the old warrior "come forth in all his glory." The "boys" of '61 set the black man free only to plunge him into competition with his white brother. In 1860 the master hunted the slave. In 1912 the slave hunts a master, if he can find one. Nowadays a man's heart is not in the right place if he does not think of his neighbor's bread and butter, as well as his own. Off comes my "lid" to the "boys" if they have paved the way to make all slaves free. Real christianity will never come as long as masters and slaves exist. Chadman's article makes me exclaim: "Go south young man! Go south!" You can count yourself lucky that it is only once in a quarter of a century that you hear from "The Devil."

Sincerely yours,

CHAS. MUNKENBERGER

P. S.—Do you still hunt "buffaloes?" I guess you know the kind I mean, and if so, who puts you "next?"

Local Institute at Clarion.

The teachers of Barnett township will hold an institute at Clarion, Saturday, February 3, 1912. From present indications it will be a good institute, as the local teachers will be assisted by Prof. Carson, Strawberry, Vandervort, and Henderson, Miss Hetrick, and in all probability by Prof. Mahey and Burnham, all from other townships. The citizens of Clarion are all assisting and trying to make this institute helpful to both teachers and pupils. In the evening Dr. Byron W. King will give a recital. Dr. King not only has a reputation as president of King School of Oratory, but also by his lectures throughout all the United States. May be recommended by all who have heard him. This will be a treat for us all. Teachers of other townships and patrons of schools are invited to attend all sessions of the institute. Program as follows:
