—The recent sensational announcement that iron ore beds amounting to billions of tons had been discovered in Warren, this county, this state, turns out a very much exaggerated tale. The U. S. geological survey points out that a billion tons of iron would occupy a volume nearly equal to the mass of the three mountains in which this wonderful deposit is claimed to have been discovered.

—Wallace Mealy got an icy bath in Tionesta creek last Saturday, which fortunately resulted in nothing worse than a good ducking. He was helping to rebuild the Coleman & Watson suspension foot bridge at John's run, when the wire slipped and the bridge sagged to one side, pitching him into the high water a hundred feet from shore. He started for shore, which he reached some distance below, just as a boat got to him. After partly drying his clothes he finished his day's work.

Dwelling Burns at Nebraska and Mrs. Ada Wiant is Badly Burned.

Mrs. Ada Wiant of Nebraska was very seriously burned in a fire which destroyed her home at four o'clock Tuesday morning. Mrs. Wiant had arisen at four o'clock to begin the day's work and when she approached the kitchen stove with a lighted match to light the gas, there was a loud explosion which set fire to her clothing and the house. Mrs. Wiant ran from the house and screamed for help. The first to reach her were the night watchman at the mill, George Kerr, and her son Russell Wiant, who was sleeping in a room off from the kitchen. The men beat out the flames in her clothing and she was taken to the Forest Hotel. Dr. Serrill of Kellettville was summoned, who found that she was very seriously burned about the face, hands, arms and upper part of the body, but that she had not inhaled the flames and would recover. She was taken this morning to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Warren Carr, at Mayburg. It is not known what caused the accumulation of gas in the stove.

The house was totally destroyed and Mrs. Wiant lost her household goods. Russell Wiant lost his clothing and a suit case in which he had $100 in cash. $12.50 of this was in gold, which he later dug out of the ashes. The balance in bills was burned. The house was a double dwelling and Mrs. Mary Longstreth resided in the north end. She escaped without injury and all her household goods were saved. The building was located just south of and across the road from the hotel. It was one of the landmarks of the village and was built over fifty years ago, being formerly known as the boarding house. It was owned by T. D. Collins. There was no insurance on the house or contents.

Big Scare Over Austin Dam.

The wooden dam of the Bayless Paper and Pulp Co., at Austin, Pa., gave the people at that place another big scare last week during the high water, and residents in the valley across which the dam is built were in a state of panic for several days, fleeing to the hills for safety. The sudden rise in the stream filled the dam faster than the outlet could release the water, and in a short time the flood was running over the top of the dam, making a perilous situation for those in the track of the flood, for what minute the dam would give way letting the great wall of water rush down upon them they knew not. The hillsides were filled with people who had taken refuge there, and the hotels made arrangements to accommodate their patrons in the hills. The people of the village of Costello two miles farther down the stream were in a like panic and adopted the same precautionary methods of safety.

Fortunately the dam held until the waters began to recede, but the danger from another horror such as they experienced last September was momentarily imminent. In that terrible disaster the two towns were wiped out and nearly a hundred human beings lost their lives.

The dam is but forty feet high, yet holds enough water to sweep a wide valley of everything that lies before it for miles, then what would a three-hundred foot dam, such as is proposed for Tionesta creek do to the innocent souls living below in its wake? The very thoughts of such an outrage is enough to throw a community into a state of panic.
