14 TRAPPED IN MINE BY FLOOD

Water From Leaking Reservoir Runs Into Colliery

SCORES SAVED BY WARNING

Disaster Near Uniontown, Pa.-Cloudburst Inundates Dunbar, Pa., Carry-

Away Many Houses; No Lives Lost. Fourteen men lost their lives when Evans mine No. 2, of the Suburba Coal company at Evans Station, six miles from Uniontown, Pa., was flooded.

The dead men are: Andy Valpo. John Rosco, Michael Smith, J. R. Gallery, Adam Smith, William Mosburg. Andy Bollock, Michael Felish, Frank Layoff, John Kubizena, Andy Dollesky, Russell Gardner, Pierce Solomon and Charles Levensky.

When the waters from the leaking Cool Spring reservoir came rushing down the mountainside sixty-four men were in the mine. The water was seen going in the manway of the mine by William Genear, the pit boss; Solomon Wilson, a machinist, and Joe Fordyce, who were outside the mine. They rushed in the mine and passed the warning along that the mine was being flooded. The fourteen who perished were 4,000 feet back in the mine in what is known as the "sump" and the word either failed to reach them or they did not heed the warning. The water rushed into the mine W. Va.

with such force through the manwa that a hole seventy-five feet diameter was carved out. The wives and families of the miners gathered at the main opening and picking up pieces of wood, stones and everything that they could they threw them into the manway to keep the waters from rushing into the narrow manway.

The rubbish which was intended to keep the water from getting into the mine hindered the miners who were rushing to the outside for safety. The men were compelled to wade through water up to their necks.
