Mr. Coleman, senior member of the Coleman, Watson & Co. lumbering firm of this place, was a passenger on the early morning train down the river Thursday when the passengers were treated to a rare sight as the train neared Trunkeyville station. Conductor Fred Landsrath saw what he supposed was a big black dog swimming the river from the opposite shore and apparently headed directly for the tracks. It only required a second look for Mr. Landsrath to de ternine it was a bear and he called the attention of his passengers to the novel sight. Before bruin had negotisted the entire distance be changed his mind and back tracking started in the same direction from which he had first been seen gress as soon as the male partion of th little settlement could get their arms and ammunition out.

Last Saturday a week J. C. Hobaugh, of Greenville, Mercer county, invaded the bear preserve of Captain J. M. Gayetty, of Oil City, near Blue Jay, this county, and bagged a bear that weighed 190 pounds. One day last week a bear of unusual size came into the road a mile up Jamieson run from the mouth and walked a distance of a hundred rods or more until he encountered the rod lines spanning the road on Elmer Fleming's lease. The working of the line evidently made bruin a little skeptical and he made a detour through the woods reaching his goal, an old apple orchard, by another route, and filled up on his favorite fruit. The tracks indicate that he was no cub. Several bears have already been slain in the vicinity of Tidioute and Cobham this season, and up in the vicinity of Mayburg one or two have been bagged and the prospects are that more than the usual crop will be harvested there this season.

Avoid The Hot-House Home.

Karl de Schweinitz, executive secretary Pennsylvania society for the prevention of tuberculosis, says: The hot-house season is here. People are shutting up their houses and firing up their furnaces until the temperature in the average living room approaches that of an ordinary greenhouse. We forget that while a te operature of 70° may be beneficial to plants which are never taken out of a living must brave all kinds of weather Take a carnation from the conservatory and place it in the open air when the temperature is below 32° and it will die. Put hot-house men or women out on the soon they shiver.

People think that they catch cold from drafts. What a ost often happens is that they become overheated from a close hot atniosphere, and consequently are easily chilled. This lowers their vitality and allows the cold in the head to develop Persons who are accustomed to a 65° room temperature seldom suffer from chills or colds. What is more, they save coal bills. There is no reason in the world why one should cultivate a 70°, or 75°, or an 80° temperature. Beware of the stuffy home. It means lowered vitality a soft body and cold, pneumonia, and even tubercolosis.
