—Acknowledgment of subscription renewals is made as follows, with thanks: Miss Bertha Cousins, Tylersburg, Pa.; Daniel Cannon, Fagundus, Pa.; Claude Hepler, Akron, Ohio; Miss Clo E. Green, West Hickory, Pa.; Edwin Bevier, Pittsburg, Pa.; Patrick Joyce, Buffalo, N. Y.; L. B. Copeland, Tidoute, Pa. (new); J. J. Kunselman, Endeavor, Pa.; Dr. C. Y. Datar, Kellettville, Pa.; Donovan Bros., Fred Sleuon, Tionesta.

—George Holeman has closed a deal with E. E. Fleming whereby he acquires the latter's drilling rig. The machine and outfit is practically new and thoroughly complete from top to bottom, and Mr. Holeman is prepared to accept drilling contracts from any quarter, and being a practical driller himself, having had many years' experience in all sorts of territory, he feels that he can guarantee the best of satisfaction to operators who want good work and prompt results.

—The temperance debate at the court house last evening was quite well attended despite the inclement weather. The question, "Resolved, that local option is a more effective method of dealing with the liquor question than prohibition," was thrashed out effectually by Rev. W. S. Burton, Rev. B. F. Felt and Charles Clark for the affirmative side, and Rev. H. A. Bailey, Dr. Boyard and C. A. Lanson for the negative. By a close shave the judges gave the decision to the negative side.

—Unless Dame Nature gets a severe backset this is going to be one of the earliest springs since records have been kept. With the warm April-like showers the lawns and terraces are showing up in pretty carpets of velvety green, while buds on the softer trees are swollen to the bursting point, and lilac bushes are as far advanced as is usual in the middle of April. We're inclined to take the optimistic view and refuse to believe that nature is bluffing. All that is now lacking is the music of the little peep-frogs.

—A libel suit asking for the sum of $1000 has been instituted against Messrs. Bowen & McKnight, owners of the Oil City Blizzard. S. E. Walker of the Warren Times is the complainant, and the item to which objection is made appeared as a clipping from the Warren Mirror, some time last October, and was published in the humorous section of the paper. The blizzard says if Mr. Walker should succeed in finding the amount designated lying around loose about the blizzard office it is hoped he will at least divide it with them.

—John Wagner, for many years a citizen of Lickingville, where he was proprietor of the Red Lion hotel, died at his home on Friday last, aged about 55 years. He had recently undergone an operation at the Kane hospital from which he had sufficiently recovered to return home which he did two days prior to his death. Kidney trouble is given as the cause of his death, which was quite unexpected by his friends. He leaves his wife, two sons, two daughters and a host of friends to mourn his demise, having been a popular citizen in the community in which the greater part of his life was spent. Funeral services were held at his late home on Sunday, and the interment was at Shippensburg his former home.

—Drilling on the Council run deep well was resumed Monday morning after a week's delay in repairing the boiler and awaiting the arrival of a wire drilling line. Fessler Bros. have the second well on their lease on the Clapp tract under way, contractor Lusher having the drill at the top of the Cropp Hill sand yesterday. The well is located farther up the hill and about 400 feet from No. 1. Pumping on this well will begin as soon as the new power, which is on the ground, can be set up. No. 2 will be drilled deeper if it fails to show up for a producer in the Cropp sand, as did the first well. T. L. Hill and others drilled in a well in the third sand on the County Home farm, Hickory township, Friday, which made a good showing. The well was shot Saturday and indications are that it will make a paying producer. It is located west of the public road and above the school house.

The Evangelistic Conference.
The recent Conference on Evangelism and Missions at the M. E. church was well attended. Ministers from many of the towns of the Franklin District and a few pastors from other districts of the Erie Conference were in attendance. The conference opened Tuesday evening with a stereopticon address by Rev. W. S. Mitchell, of Oil City. It was necessary to use the Sunday school rooms and gallery of the church to accommodate the large audience that assembled. The lecture, "The Awakening of the Orient," gave the audience a vision of the great progress being made by the nations of the east.

Wednesday morning was devoted to "Boys' Work." The Boy Scouts attended in a body, filling the middle section of seats. Rev. W. S. Mitchell, of Oil City, spoke on "The Evangelistic Appeal," and Rev. R. L. Foulke, of Erie, on "Recreational Activities." At the close of the morning session the Ladies' Aid Society served dinner in the large dining room to the visiting delegates and the local Methodist Brotherhood. Bishop Oldham, who was a guest, paid the ladies a compliment by saying, "In all of its appointments it was the best dinner he had partaken of since leaving the Orient."

Bishop Oldham in the afternoon and evening thrilled his audience on the general theme "The Demand of Opportunity."

Thursday morning Dr. Randall, of Philadelphia, the Secretary of the Church on Evangelism, spoke on Evangelism. He spoke again in the afternoon and evening. For an hour and twenty minutes on Thursday evening he held his audience like magic.

Aside from these men of wide reputation many ministers and laymen of the Franklin district spoke on subjects assigned them and participated in the discussions. The general themes presented were Boys' Work; Men and the Church; Church Finances; Periodicals; Evangelism, and Missions.

Special music was rendered by Mrs. Cora Felt, Mrs. Bull and Prof. Gill.

In fact his clean-shaven face made him look like a boy again, but he couldn't fool us.

Mrs. George W. King.
Mrs. Margaret Fitzpatrick King, widow of the late George W. King, died at the home of her son, George L. King, at West Hickory, Pa., Sunday afternoon, March 23, 1913. Nearly 35 years ago her family moved to West Hickory where her husband purchased the James Gordon farm at the lower end of the flats. Afterwards this property passed into the hands of her son and since the death of her husband the mother had made her home and was tenderly cared for there. Besides the son she is survived by a brother, Bernard Fitzpatrick, living with the family, and two sisters and a brother residing in New York city.

Funeral services were held yesterday morning in St. John's Catholic church, Tidoute, where her body was interred beside those of her husband, Rev. Father A. H. Wiersbicki officiating.

Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers. Adv.

GREATEST FLOOD IN 46 YEARS.
Not Since the Noted Flood of '66 Has the Allegheny Been as High From Natural Water.

Forty-eight years ago this month, or to be exact, March 17, 1865, the Allegheny river attained a flood stage that, within the memory of man it had never reached before, and down to this date has not been known since, unless the present great overflow should yet attain to a similar stage.

We are speaking now of what is known as a "natural" flood, unattended by ice gorging or artificial damming.

At this hour, Wednesday, March 26, 1913, at 8:30 a. m., the flood still lacks at least 18 inches of reaching the high water mark of that eventful St. Patrick's morning, as remembered by the generation which witnessed it and still lives to tell the story. The water now appears to have reached its maximum height and is rising very slowly, if any.

At that time the breaking up of a winter noted for its heavy snowfall, a warm rain set in, and without a moment's cessation continued for three days and three nights, melting the great body of snow in the then almost unbroken forests, filling every valley and every stream to its fullest capacity.

Quite similar conditions, minus the snow, have prevailed during the past three days, or since Sunday afternoon, yet the rain has not been as incessant in this immediate locality. And another flood to date from is here.

The lower portion of the town, the flats, is covered with water, and the width of the river extends from near the railroad track on the west side to within a few rods of Elm street on the east, a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile.

Many people living in the flooded area have left their homes as a matter of safety, although few if any houses have as yet any water in them, and the water in that quarter has little current. The paved street leading to the bridge, being quite high, acted as a good dam in holding back the water coming over the banks at the upper end of town and prevented it from sweeping straight through the flats.

The Lawrence suspension foot bridge across Tionesta creek at the mouth has received a hard raking but is still hanging by the main cables.

Up to the hour of going to press no serious damage has been reported from this immediate vicinity, the cessation of all through railroad traffic being the most noticeable effect of the flood so far. The morning passenger train from Oil City arrived here about on time, but it is doubtful if it can proceed very far up the river, as the trestle across Tidoute creek, in Tidoute, is reported washed out. East Hickory flats are under water but the water has not yet entered the houses.

No serious damage is reported up along Tionesta creek but the water is very high.

Thirty Years Ago.
In 1883, just 30 years ago, Good Friday fell on March 23. The morning following there was wild excitement in the Oil exchange owing to rumors from O. Murphy's well at Baittown, known as Porky No. 1, which will be recalled with interest by the old-timers. The market had been slowly advanced since March 10, when it was 88 cents, until on Thursday night previous to the Good Friday holiday it closed at $1.02, with a large long interest. The Porky well was nearing the sand but the owner had no intention of drilling it in when the exchanges were closed. A mistake in the change made by Mike Feeley, who had drilled the rig, and while guards were placed around it and efforts made to keep its size a mystery, the fact that it would be a good well could not be hidden.

Saturday morning the market opened at $1.00, and closed at 98 cents on rumors that the well had more gas than oil. The Monday following, however, as the trade obtained more accurate information from the scouts, the market dropped to 92 cents. Speculative losses were heavy, and many a man who had a small fortune Thursday night had lost it at the close on Monday. When it was connected to the tanks five days later the well made 65 barrels the first hour and 72 the second.

One of the incidents connected with this event will always be told with a relish by any of those who chanced to be present Good Friday morning in the telegraph office at Garfield. Most of the scouts were resting there for the holidays. Just before the hour for the market to open on other days Jim Emery, a contractor at Baittown, came riding up in hot haste, rushed into the office and with a hurried nod to the assembled scouts, began laboriously writing out a message. Emery's cypher code consisted of only two words, one signifying "dry as a bone," and the other: "well flowing to skin hell." He had come past the Porky well, saw its smoking remains, divined the meaning of it, and rushed to the nearest telegraph office at Garfield, eight miles away. He believed he alone knew the important news, and as he wrote his message he lered with a cunning smile at the scouts, ignorant of the sensation he would spring on them. Emery was asked for news, and after getting his message off, said: "Boys, give me ten minutes after the market opens, and I'll tell you all about it. Biggest thing of the year." "Take all the time you want, Jim," said one of the scouts. "This is Good Friday, and no exchanges open." As the usefulness of his wild ride and the hopelessness of any pecuniary advantage from being the first with the news dawned on him, Emery sank down on a bench with a muttered: "Well, damn the Catholics!" —Oil City Derrick.

Kellettville.
Mrs. A. L. Weiler and son Ray were business visitors in Tionesta Saturday. Mrs. Jay Catlin had a severe attack of neuralgia the first of the week. Miss Pearl Datar was home from Holl's business college at Warren to spend the Easter vacation with her parents. She returned again Monday. Mrs. George Klinefelter was a Warren visitor Saturday. The supper served by the ladies aid society Saturday evening was quite liberally patronized and a neat sum was added to their treasury as a result of their efforts. It was quite a cold night and the gas failed, but oil stoves and lamps overcame this difficulty and the three freezers of ice cream were disposed of regardless of unfortunate circumstance. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hartman visited friends in Mayburg Sunday. Albert Dunkle was called to Fisher Thursday by the illness and death of his aged mother, who was buried Monday. Mr. Duick remained for the funeral. Margaret Frampton was down from Mayburg over Sunday. Verne Albaugh has moved his family into the house lately vacated by O. Mason on Factory Row, and has fitted up his late residence for a barber shop. Members of the high school celebrated St. Patrick's day with a party in the hall Monday evening. Mrs. F. J. Henderson visited her son in Jamestown and did some shopping there and at Warren, several days during the week. Alva Watson was home from State College for a few days' Easter vacation. His mother having planned a pleasant surprise for the rest of the family by sending for him to come home without their knowledge, he very cleverly included her in the surprise by not enlightening her of his intentions. He arrived at West Hickory on the evening train and walked over to Kellettville, and arriving at his home about midnight he entered by a window and retired, only announcing his arrival when he arose in the morning and marched to the kitchen demanding his share of eggs for breakfast. The new mill was shut down all week for repairs and the placing of a new feed. Willard Ray has been on the sick list for the past week suffering with cold and croup. The mandolin club has announced a play, "Between the Acts," to be given by the members of the club in the hall on Thursday and Saturday evenings, March 27 and 28. The senior class and teachers of the high school expect to assign the work for commencement this week. Melvin Dotterer is home from Allegheny College for a ten days' Easter vacation. A wreck on the S. & T. R. R. delayed the passenger train about 1½ hours Saturday evening. It also delayed the freight so that they could not make their run on time. An improvised crew consisting of H. B. Dotterer, Fred and George Klinefelter and Harry Port went up to Sheffield and relieved the regular crew, arriving in town with the train during the night. Mr. and Mrs. James Lightner visited friends in Mayburg several days during the week. Wm. Merchant was a business visitor in Oil City several days the first of the week. E. E. Daubenspeck was down to his farm near Tylersburg Saturday looking after his interests there. Henry Parker of Goinza visited his son George over Thursday night. David Confer of Lickingville was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kinch during the week. Len Barnes is building an addition to his home up Salmon creek. Mr. Finley has moved his family into the house known as the Forbes house, but now owned by Mr. Poehy. Rev. and Mrs. Geo. S. Bryan have been in town all week while conducting revival services at the F. M. church. During the meetings thus far four have professed conversion, while a number have expressed a desire for a more consecrated life.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.
There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. It is not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used all sorts of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by all dealers. Adv.
