WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1913

On Saturday Governor Tener signed the bill to submit to the people at the November election the proposed amendment to the constitution, permitting the state to borrow $50,000,000 for road construction. The vote in November will determine whether or not the people want the State to build these great highways, or whether they would rather plod along through mud and mire in the same old slipshod fashion that has prevailed from time immemorial.

PROBING for that "insidious lobby, from which President Wilson pretends to auticipate such dire calamity to his free trade bill, has been going on in Washington for a week or more, and yet no nigger has been discovered in the wood pile up to this minute. We thought that the last campaign was fought out largely on the question of whether the people should rule, but it would seem that after the President, Congressmen and Senators are once elected, the people have no right to consult with them on the subject of business or politics, and that all persons, business men representing great industries, and labor organizations, must stay away from Washington while tariff and other important legislation is under consideration. A new Democratic doctrine, surely. And the people must not get too close to the powers that be,

West Hickory School.

On Wednesday morning June 4th Kathleen Kerr and Charles B. King were presented with diplomas at the Wes Hickory school for having completed the full three years' high school course prescribed by the State. These young people are the first to receive diplomas from the new high school of Harmony township. On this occasion the Rev. Mr. Dale made a fitting address to the school. Mr. King, Mr. Atherton, and Mr. Morrison made brief speeches, and all gave high praise to the principal, Miss Alice Neill Siggins, and the grade teachers, Miss Mary Casey, Miss Margaret Mooney, and Miss Cio E Green, for their excellent work, and also commended the pupils for their very evident interest in their studies. At the close of his address, Mr. Dale presented a prize of one dollar to John Zurfluh for his progress in writing. This prize was offered by Miss Green for the member of her school who should show most improvement in writing since Christmas. While only two pupils graduated this year, it is expected that there will be a class of five next year. Four boys were promoted from the eighth grade, and the high school will probably be augmented by pupils from other parts of the town-

All this is very gratifying to the members of the school boards who promoted the building of this fine school costing between $8,000 and $9,000. They feel that the work being done has justified them in building for the future.

Since this new school building is one of which our county should be proud, it is not out of the way to give a description of it. The two story structure is of red brick with yellow brick and gray sandstone trimmings; it stands on a high stone foundation, and is roofed with slate. In front is a square cupola which holds the bell, One enters a central hall from which rises a double stairway of oak. There are four large rooms, two on each floor, lighted in the method required by the state, and which has proven most satisfactory in use. The building has a large basement in which are the two furnaces. The sanitary arrangements are good. The water of the drinking fountain in the front hall comes from deep wells. Four nest cloak rooms, a book room, improved window shades, good black boards. are parts of the convenient equipment. The state has given the school two fine cases of specimens, one showing the commercial products raised and used in the country and photographs showing processes of manufacture. The other contains specimens of woods and minerals under study. But what all visitors speak of, and which is a constant pleasure to the teachers and pupils, is the wonderful outlook from the windows of the school. The views up and down the Allegheny exceptional beauty. On May 2d "Patrons Day" was observed, when the work of all the grades was on exhibition, and more than seventy parents and friends of the pupils came to see syidence of the good work accomplished. This exhibition did much to develop pride and enthusiasm in the school, and this esprit de corps will no doubt be greatly increased as during the summer and fall our lads show on the base ball ground that Jack is not a duil
