MINERS ASKED MARTIAL LAW

So Testifies Ex-Governor Glasscock at W. Va. Probe SAYS LIFE WAS THREATENED

Ex-Governor Insists Civil Courts in Strike Zone Were Helpless and Martial Law Was Only Course Left Former Governor William E. Glasscock of West Virginia told the senatorial investigation committee in that state that he declared martial law in the Paint creek and Cabin creek mining districts because of turmoil between striking miners and mine guards, against the opposition of the coal operators and at the plea of the prosecuting attorney and sheriff of Kanawha county and asserted his belief in the right of the military commission to act as it had done.

The senatorial committee promptly frowned down an attempt to question the justification of the former governor's declaration of martial law. The committee will never pass on the good faith of the governor, said Borah. Glasscock said he thought the presence of the mine guards was largely the cause of the violent outbreaks in the strike zone.

"The situation was that these mine guards were armed in that district and were causing the disturbance and, to get rid of them, you declared martial law? Is that right?" asked Senator Borah. "That is not exactly it. These men were in there. They were in control and the miners were contending with them for supremacy, and to quiet the situation I declared martial law. I want to say that I believe that I never acted more conscientiously in my life than when I took charge of that district."

He explained that he declared martial law because he was convinced the civil courts were not administering justice. "Miners and others were coming to me," he said, "and telling me of pitched battles that had been fought. I had heard of twenty-five or thirty murders and no prosecutions had been made. That convinced me that the courts were not controlling the situation."

He said his own life had been threatened at various times and speeches were made in several miners' meetings accusing him of "kidding while Rome burned." "The miners requested the first declaration of martial law. I told them that a declaration of martial law was the only method by which I could eject the mine guards from the strike zone."

According to the witness the trouble originated in the refusal of some of the operators on Paint creek to renew agreements with the United Mine workers. After that the trouble arose from complaints of the conduct of mine guards in the district. "Do you suppose the trouble could have been stopped?" asked Senator Borah, "if you could have removed those guards and substituted your own police?"

"I thought so at the time," said Mr. Glasscock. "Now I could not say." The executive said that when the state troops disarmed the men in the strike district six machine guns were taken from the mine guards. "How many of these mine guards were there in the district when martial law was declared?" asked Senator Borah. "We took about seventy-five out of the field."

"Did the mine operators object to your disarming the mine guards?" Senator Borah asked. "Yes they did." Calvin, an ex-mine guard, was the star witness for the miners. He told the committee of his experiences on the armored train which shot up the camp of the miners at Hollygrove on Paint creek just before the last declaration of martial law. Calvin accused Quinn Morton, a mine operator, of urging that the train return and fire again on the tented camp, after the fire from the cars had once raked the little village, and after Cisco Estep had been killed beside his home. Quinn Morton himself, Sheriff Bonner Hill and others who were on the train will be called in an effort to disprove Calvin's statement.

"There were ten or twelve men in the armored car attached to the train," said Calvin, "and when we got just above Paint Creek Junction all of them began getting rifles, which were in the car. The brakeman came through the train and turned down the lights. He told us not to raise the windows, but to shoot right through the windows. I was leaning out of an open window and as we came up to Hollygrove I saw a stream of fire start out of the baggage car, just ahead, where the machine guns were mounted. The stream kept up as we went through Hollygrove. As we passed I saw three or four flashes of fire from the train."

"Were there any shots from the tents before the shooting began from the train?" asked Attorney Becher for the miners. "I didn't see any," said the witness. "I just heard the engine whistle blow, toot-toot, and the shooting from the train began. I am positive the shooting first began from the baggage car."

HOUSE SETS JUNE 26 FOR GETAWAY

Members, Tiring of Capital, Ignore Speaker's Plea SENATE EXPECTED TO AGREE

Clark Bill For Commission Government For Third Class Cities Passes Both Houses and Goes to Governor. The house by a vote of 161 to 76 fixed June 26 as the date of final adjournment. The senate is expected to concur in the resolution and the work of preparing for the getaway will be on in earnest.

Speaker George E. Altier and a number of prominent representatives fought the resolution, but a majority was tired of remaining here and many of the members are feeling the drain on their pocketbooks. The important legislation remaining to be acted upon include the following bills: Public utilities, workmen's compensation, child labor, women's working hours, the election measures congressional apportionment, and several of the pieces of legislation recommended by the governor. It will mean that a large amount of work will be crowded into a few days.

The Clark bill, to provide a modified commission form of government for third class cities, is ready for the action of the governor when the presiding officers of the two bodies sign the measure. Both houses have agreed to the conference committee report. The governor is expected to approve the bill. The Clark bill would not permit the mayors of third class cities to succeed themselves, as there is no clause repealing the act which prevents succession.

Important taxation bills were concurred in by the house, one being the measure to place a tax of 2 1/2 per cent per ton, ad valorem, on all anthracite coal, the counties to receive a share of the tax, and the other to make personal property tax payable to counties instead of to the state. The house went over the reports of the investigating committee which eroded the charges made against Judge Charles N. Brumm of Schuylkill county by Cornelius F. Foley, a Socialist barber. The majority report recommending the acquittal of Judge Brumm was unanimously adopted after the minority report which recommended impeachment, had been defeated. The house insisted that free lunch shall be abolished as well as "growlers" when it refused to concur in the senate amendments to the Kaufman bill, supplementing the liquor laws of 1887. The bill as passed the house prohibited the "growler" and made it unlawful for bars to furnish free lunch. The senate amended the bill, cutting out the free lunch prohibition clause, and passed the measure.

Representatives Allen of Allegheny and John R. K. Scott of Philadelphia drew a couple of more defeats in the house when they tried to defeat appropriation bills. Allen undertook to whip the measure to appropriate $300,000 to the Panama-Pacific exposition to be held in San Francisco, and Scott tried to cut down the appropriation for the Panxutawney hospital. Allen lost his fight by a vote of 177 to 38, while Scott was defeated 128 to 27.

Governor Tener approved the Hunter bill, to authorize first and second class cities to compensate employees for time lost while in the employ of the city as a result of injuries, sickness or disablement of any kind, sustained while in the performance of their duties. Other bills signed were: Conferring upon third class cities and boroughs the right to define by ordinance a reasonable district within which all electric light, telephone and telegraph wires shall be placed underground and giving cities or boroughs the right to acquire or condemn conduits.

Providing that parades of veteran soldiers for funerals or to attend services on Sunday may be accompanied by a proper military band, but that bands shall not play upon return from service. Regulating liability of hotel keepers for loss of valuables by guests and providing that they shall not be required to receive for safe keeping valuables worth over $300 unless by special arrangement.

Regulating manner of filing statements with county commissioners to entitle fair associations to receive state aid. The governor approved the Jones bill, appropriating $1,000,000 to pay the 50 per cent bonus on cash road tax in second class townships. The bill provides for the deficiency which has arisen because of insufficient appropriations by the legislature of 1911 and also for the road year ending the first Monday in December, 1912.

The governor also signed the Hagerly house bill, providing that boroughs shall elect controllers in place of the auditors who now have charge of supervision of accounts. Friedmann Patient Dies. Injections of Dr. Friedmann's turtle serum did not afford relief to Leo Friedman, a sufferer from tuberculosis, of Faxon, Pa., who died three weeks after receiving Dr. Friedmann's treatment in New York.
