WILSON GOES TO CONGRESS AGAIN

Reads His Message on Currency Legislation

BRYAN INDORSES THE PLAN

Secretary Says Measure is Remarkable Because It Reconciles Conflicting Convictions—House Interested.

The president of the United States went to congress again Monday afternoon to deliver the second message of his administration.

As when President Wilson submitted his ideas on the tariff reform congress met in joint session in the chamber of the house to hear his message on currency legislation.

For the second time in more than 100 years upon such an occasion the senate marched in a body to the house chamber. The front rows were reserved for the senators, members of the house crowding into the rear seats.

The president's address to congress on currency legislation was well received. Senators and representatives alike listened with respectful attention. It was more of an appeal for cooperation than an executive declaration of specific action.

What the president really counseled the legislature to do was to efface selfish considerations and personal comforts in order to bring about the needed reformation of the fiscal system. He dwelt at length on the suggestion that he has held out in previous statements of a less formal nature that currency and banking reform were a necessary corollary to tariff reform.

From a spectacular point of view the second personal appearance of the president in the hall lacked much of the detail of the first visit to the house of representatives chamber.

Secretary of State Bryan in a formal statement warmly indorses the currency bill in every particular and urges both Democrats and Republicans to support it. He says in part:

"It is a much better bill than I supposed it possible to secure at this time. Conflicting opinions honestly entertained and strongly adhered to have been reconciled with a success hardly to be expected. I have doubted until recently the wisdom of attempting currency legislation at this session, but my doubts were largely due to the fact that I feared the difficulty in the way would prevent an agreement upon a plan.

The plan which the president urges centers great advantages on the banks while it preserves to the people acting through the government all that is essential for the protection of the public.

"The original reserve banks are to represent not only the national banks of the district but such state banks as are willing to put themselves on a footing which will be equitable to the national banks. This is an important provision and gives to the state institutions a protection which they deserve, for they share with the national banks the responsibility of furnishing banking facilities to the business of the country.

"The great point of advantage to the banks—an advantage that ought to make them willing to accept the bill without question—is that it furnishes a currency which they can secure in time of need without having to put up bonds as security.

"The business interests will I think welcome this bill as an unalloyed blessing. It gives them through their banks a promise of relief in any time of stringency and it gives this promise without putting in the hands of the banks a power that might be used against the public."

BOYS DROWN IN RAPIDS

Two Meet Death When Boat Drifts Into Treacherous Waters.

The whirlpool rapids of Niagara took two more lives when Donald Rosco, aged nine, and Herbert Moore, eleven, were so unfortunate as to drift within grasp of those awful waves in a boat in which they had been playing near shore a half mile or so up the gorge. Elliott Thompson, a boy twelve years old, was in the boat also, but he realized that to stick to the boat meant death in the rapids he bade his little friends, who could not swim, goodbye and leaped out in the water to make a successful effort to reach shore.

A little boy, Harold George, whose home is on the river bank, saw the boys in the boat from his house and sent a telephone alarm to the city firemen. They responded with ropes and ladders but not quick enough to effect a rescue, the boat and children having drifted into the rapids before the firemen reached the bridges from which they would have attempted a rescue. During the half hour or more that the boat and boys drifted toward death spectators fiercely condemned the federal, state and Canadian governments for not having established lifesaving devices to prevent such accidents.

The first big wave upset the boat and tossed the little ones into the rapids where they sank to watery graves, the spectators turning away horrified.

PRIMARY BILL BEING FIXED UP

Legislature Conference Are Making Good Progress

SENATE RUSHES MONEY BILLS

Appropriations Totalling $25,000,000 Pushed Through in Few Minutes. Home Rule Measure Postponed.

The senate and house conferees on the statewide primary bill made good progress and the members are hopeful that they can make a report to their respective branches this week.

The only questions not settled are the provisions for the nomination by nomination paper, the assistance of party titles, the assistance of voters and fusion. A plan to clear the provision for nomination by nomination papers has been considered by the committee and practically agreed upon.

The municipal "home rule" bill, presented in the senate by C. A. Snyder, Schuylkill, was the object of an attack in the house and after a motion to strike it from the calendar had been defeated it was postponed. The bill would permit any city to prepare and amend its own charter and was recently put on the calendar notwithstanding the negative action of the municipal corporations committee.

By a vote of 68 to 48 the bill to require all street cars to be equipped with enclosed front platforms between Nov. 1 and April 1 was defeated. It also would have done away with running boards on street cars.

In exactly eighteen minutes the senate passed 368 appropriation bills on first reading, setting aside about $25,000,000 of state funds for hospital, homes and educational institutions.

No changes were made in the appropriations of $1,500,000 for the University of Pennsylvania, $1,000,000 for the University of Pittsburgh and $1,500,000 for State college. The senate committee agrees to set aside $1,500,000 for the emergency men held in reserve by Pennsylvania during the Civil war.

The senate increased the amount appropriated to the state board of education for the purchase of normal schools, from $200,000 to $400,000. Unable to agree on the workmen's compensation measure the conference committees of the house and senate of the state legislature are in a deadlock which is blamed on the senate committee.

The house conferees are Warren K. Miller of Lehigh, George C. Irwin of Blair and Hugh B. Piper of Philadelphia. Each rose to a question of personal privilege in the house and stated the situation as they saw it. They were unsparing of the senate members, charging them with deliberately deceiving the workmen of the state and representing personal interests. Piper predicted that a great strike would result. He said the miners would walk out of the mines and the railroads would cease to run.

Miller said that after two weeks on the committee he thought a statement of what had been done was due the house.

"We were told by the senators," said he, "that there was no use meeting, as we could not agree. We were informed the senators wanted time to examine the insurance plans of other states and were put off with the excuse that they had not had an opportunity to read these laws."

James P. Maurer, president of the state Federation of Labor, issued a statement in which he said it was evident there would be no compensation bill passed. He predicted serious labor disturbances as the failure of the senate to act.

The senate passed the woman labor bill with the amendments inserted. The measure now goes back to the house, which will probably refuse to concur in the amendments and the measure will go to a conference committee.

The senate amended the child labor bill to exempt nurses, hotel employees and telephone and telegraph operators from the night labor prohibition and to exempt canning factories entirely from the provisions of the bill.

The senate concurred with the house in passing the joint resolution for amendment to the constitution to abolish the department of international affairs. It requires the approval of another legislature before it can be submitted to the people. The house defeated the Jones bill giving the state highway department supervision over construction and repair of townships roads.

Washington and Jefferson college has given the house notice that it does not want a state appropriation. The information was contained in a telegram from Judge John M. Kennedy and M. W. Archeson, Jr., of Pittsburgh, trustees of the college.

Senator Edison had a bill passed finally in the senate appropriating $60,000 to the college and a similar bill was introduced into the house.

Smoking in Bed Divorce Ground. That her husband sat in bed and smoked and kept her awake most of the night, is the testimony of Mrs. Anna M. Bennett of Pittsburgh in her application for a divorce. An absolute decree was recommended by the master.

EXPOSE OF SUGAR LOBBY SECRETS

Private Letters Seized and Read by Senate Probers

MIGHTY EFFORT TO INFLUENCE

Purchase of Chicago Newspaper Bonds in Order to Secure Part Control One of Many Ways to Get People's Ear.

The inner workings of the beet sugar lobby were laid before the senate investigators through the seizure by one of the deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate of many letters addressed to C. C. Hamlin, until recently chairman of the executive committee of the United States beet sugar industry and now representing the beet sugar people in Washington.

The sixty-nine letters read into the record indicated that sums of money larger than have been mentioned were available under assessment levied against beet sugar factories and also indicated:

That beet sugar interests, under the guidance of C. B. Warren of Detroit, president of the Michigan Beet Sugar company, and Republican national committeeman from that state, began negotiations to purchase $25,000 of bonds of the Chicago Inter-Ocean for the purpose of controlling the paper.

That Aaron Gove, an agent of the beet sugar interests, was incurring expenses which he did not wish to itemize if the books were ever to be audited.

That Gove in a letter stated that he had succeeded in getting the Associated Press to agree to carry a 650-word pro-sugar story and that he had taken up the question of publicity with Melville E. Stone, head of that organization.

That the sugar lobby was busy preparing data for speeches on the tariff to be made by members in congress.

That Henry T. Oxnard entertained a senatorial committee to influence its opinion of the tariff.

That paid agents were busy in conventions and meetings over the entire United States causing resolutions to be adopted satisfactory to the tariff ideas of the beet sugar makers or stopping the passage of the adverse legislation.

That Senator Smoot was informed of the project to purchase control of the Chicago Inter-Ocean and thought it important.

That an agent of the sugar makers traveled over the country and succeeded in getting inspired "stories" into several daily papers.

C. C. Hamlin wrote to C. B. Warren of Detroit March 20, 1912, the copy of a letter showed:

"I have had two conferences with Mr. Hinman, who controls the Chicago Inter-Ocean. It seems that Mr. Hinman has purchased or arranged to purchase $200,000 of the bonds of the Inter-Ocean formerly held by the Yerkes estate, but as I gather it is not in shape to handle the proposition personally and desires to place these bonds. Of the $200,000 bonds mentioned $165,000 has already been placed and Mr. Hinman desires assistance in handling the remaining $35,000. In placing the bonds already sold Mr. Hinman has had the assistance of Vice President Sherman and ex-Speaker Cannon, both of whom are interested in seeing him carry through this transaction. His proposal is that we assist him in taking care of the remainder of these bonds. It certainly seems to me it would be good business for our people to make this investment and thereby establish an organ in the middle west which will give our industry the attention it deserves."

The sugar lobbyists who have been on the witness stand listened to the reading of the letters highly incensed, declaring that their constitutional rights were being violated.

MALE SUFFRAGETTE DIES Attempt to Spoil Ascot Classic Results Fatally.

Fired by the recent example of Miss Emily Wilding Davison during the race for the derby, a male suffragist committed suicide by flinging himself in front of August Belmont's four-year-old Tracer during the race for the valuable Ascot gold cup. His act deprived the American sportsman of a good chance of capturing the trophy.

The man was killed on the spot. The horse and its rider, although they were brought to the ground, were not harmed. It was learned later that the man's name was Hewitt and that he was an undergraduate at Cambridge.

Appointed Customs Receiver at Santo Domingo

WALTER W. VICK.

The report of Walter W. Vick's appointment as customs receiver at Santo Domingo has had a favorable effect on the bonds and other financial interests of that republic in Wall Street. Mr. Vick gained a wide reputation for his business efficiency through the way in which he handled the funds of the Democratic national committee. He will have charge of ten customs houses, the Haitian border interests and the $20,000,000 bond issue floated recently.

DENOUNCES CARNEGIE CASH

Bishop Candler Criticizes Million Dollar Gift to Vanderbilt.

Charges that the recently announced gift of $1,000,000 by Andrew Carnegie to Vanderbilt university, Nashville, Tenn., "is not a donation but a shrewd attempt to get control of part of the university property" and that the retired ironmaster is "dangling money before the public with the purpose of influencing litigation pending over the university," are made in a statement given out in Atlanta, Ga., by Bishop W. A. Candler of the Methodist Episcopal church, South.

Bishop Candler characterized Carnegie's offer of a donation to the university as an "impudent proposal of an agnostic steel monger."

"This loud-heralded gift," Bishop Candler's statement recites, "on close inspection of its terms appears to be no gift at all, but a shrewd attempt to get control of a part of the property of Vanderbilt university in order to set up a medical school fashioned according to the peculiar ideas of Mr. Carnegie."

UNUSUAL MOVE BY JURORS First Degree Murder Verdict Shows Five For Acquittal.

The unusual move of a jury returning a first degree murder verdict and five men on the jury later changing their minds and asking for acquittal was witnessed in criminal court in Indiana, Pa., in the case of Harry Spence, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Snathers Clark.

There was no dissent to the verdict of guilty in the first degree when it was read by Clerk of Courts John C. Wells and it would have stood had not one of the attorneys for Spence requested that the jury be polled. This was done and five of the jurors answered "Not guilty by reason of insanity."

Judge S. J. Telford sent the twelve men back to reach a legal verdict. They found Spence guilty again.
