CARS WERE BEING BACKED UP

Man, Wife, Two Children and Sieterin-Law Meet Death Near Butler Junction, Pa .- Train Was Special.

A family was wiped out when an automobile in which were J. E. Rowan, thirty-five, his wife and two children, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Allen Wood Smith, all of Brackenbridge, Pa., was struck by a special train occupied by R. S. O'Donnell, general superintendent of the West Penn division of the Pennsylvania railroad, and officials of the company, who were making an inspection trip at Lane station, Laneville, Pa., one-half mile east of Butler Junction, Pa., on the Butler branch of the West Penn rail-

Rowan, his wife and one child, one year old, were killed instantly, the others dying shortly afterward.

The automobile was coasting down the Freeport hill. The special, which had stopped at Lane station, was backing down the track toward the Freeport road. The automobile and the special reached the crossing at the same time and before Rowan or the engineer saw the approach of the other the train crashed into the automobile.

The automobile was carried along the track for seventy-five feet and wrecked. The occupants of the car were thrown to the side of the track, crushed and bruised. Rowan, who was driving the machine, was cut in half by the train.

FIRE DAMAGES IMPERATOR

Second Officer Killed-Liner Leaves on Schedule Time.

The steamship Imperator, damaged by fire while laying at her dock in Hoboken, N. J., sailed on Saturday as scheduled. The company announced the great ship would be repaired, so far as possible, at sea.

The loss may reach $50,000. Alone in the depths of the ship, fighting the fire singlehanded, the second officer, Karl Gobrecht, lost his life. Most of the ship's provisions were destroyed. The fire was at the bottom of the provision hatch, which is nearly below the stern end of the upper decks. Tois divided into twelve great compart ments crossways, or abeam, as the sailor says. They are numbered from compartment 11 next to the stern. The cause of the fire is not known and won't be until all the water is out of the flooded compartment. Faulty insulation was the best guess Captain Ruser could make. An important thing in the minds of the officers is this: They are sure that the fire could never have started at sea.

"There would then have been men down there at all hours," explained one. "The fire could never have got such a start without discovery."

The Imperator had landed all first and second cabin passengers. The 1,200 odd steerage passengers aboard her were all quartered forward and most of them so far from the fire that they did not know there was one until landing on the 1,000 foot pier they saw the hose up over the ship's side.

the house on or about Sept, 8 according to a statement made by Chairman Glass of the committee on banking and currency. Mr. Glass believes that the measure will be passed by the house before Sept. 20.

The administration bill passed the caucus without any change that was not proposed or agreed to by the administration leaders. The insurgents made a lot of noise from the beginning but they were compelled to bow to the superior force of numbers.
