NOT A DEFENSE, ONLY THE FACTS

Has the Highway Department
Been Unduly Extravagant?

PRELIMINARY WORK IS DONE

Accurate Road Maps Required Before
Construction of Good Roads Could Start—Otherwise Funds Would Be Expended Improperly.

Notwithstanding the fact that Governor Tener plainly stated, at the Harrisburg Good Roads Convention, September 18, that the Legislature of 1915 will have the work and responsibility of enacting the laws authorizing and regulating the issuing of the proposed road bonds, and a new administration the duty of putting them into operation, provided the constitutional amendment is carried, there are still unthinking people who attempt to argue otherwise.

Whether rightly or wrongly, a sentiment seems to exist in the minds of some persons that the State Highway Department has been unduly extravagant in the expenditure of the State's highway funds, but few of the persons making such suggestions have ever read the highway law, or know the details of its provisions.

While this phase of the road subject has no direct bearing on the constitutional amendment, which must be passed if the roads are to be built for the use of the present generation, it is wise to correct misapprehensions which may exist in connection with highway subjects.

One of the provisions of the Sproul highway law was that accurate road maps should be made of every county in the State. This is a work of great magnitude, requiring the survey and measurement by skilled surveyors of every mile of road in Pennsylvania. Not only must the location of the roads be established, but the width; the radius of curves; the irregularities of property lines; the streams; the drainage area and water outlet, all must be included in this permanent record. Its immediate practicability concerns mostly the roads included in the State highway system, for it will frequently be necessary, in improving these highways, to change locations to secure better grades, correct the alignment, avoid grade crossings, and secure better lines of sight for the avoidance of accidents, buying or exchanging road property. In order to do this the maps must be perfect and must be kept corrected as such changes are made.

This surveying and map making, requiring the services of skilled and competent men, is expensive. Up to the date of the last report of the Department more than thirty-five thousand miles of the highways of the State had been surveyed and placed on the maps, and the cost of surveying and mapping each road can be found in the published reports.

A close study of the reports discloses the fact that in nearly every instance, the work was done at a cost considerably less than would have been charged by an engineering and map-making firm. Wherever county surveys were available in accurate form they were utilized; but it frequently occurred that there were errors in these county surveys that had to be corrected, and in most counties the surveys were so incomplete as to be of little use.

This is not intended as a defense of the present highway department, but merely designed to show the facts to those who openly allege that the highway funds have been squandered, and who argue against the proposed amendment to the State constitution on the ground that much of the money might be wasted or—worse.

The Sproul law and the 1911 appropriation contemplated the making of these surveys and maps. They are necessary in building a State road system. Every State which has built good roads has had to make similar maps of its highway. Without them the roads could not be improved, nor could intelligent plans for good road construction be made.

In this, as in a great variety of other subjects connected with the roads there is only needed a plain statement of the facts to change an objector into a good roads advocate.

There seems no possible argument against the constitutional amendment providing fifty million dollars with which to build the roads that a close study of the facts themselves will not overcome. The exercise of ordinary horse sense in getting at the truth of the subject in all its phases will compel every voter to see for himself that not only his own best interests, but the best interests of the Commonwealth as a whole are in the direction of the adoption of the constitutional amendment; the issue of bonds by the Legislature of 1915, and the building of a system of highways which will develop Pennsylvania's resources, and place its people on an equal footing with those of other advanced States in the pursuit of wealth, health and happiness.

FARMERS FAVOR BONDS

The Defeat of Bonds Would Possibly Mean a General Tax.

No farmer should vote against the Bond Issue, for its defeat may mean a general State road tax which would place the burden on the land not on corporations.

DIVORCED FROM DEAD MAN

Queer Requirements Made in France That Official Records May Be Completed.

In France, as in some other countries, every citizen has an official history. Not as varied and interesting as his real history, but still important. From this there follow at times quaint consequences. If a woman is married, for example, a wife she remains officially though the husband may be missing.

Consider the case of the painter who went fishing on Antille bay. He has not since been seen. The body of one man who went with him was washed ashore lifeless. You would call this tolerably convincing proof that his wife had been made a widow. She thought so and in due time she sought to have it recorded in her official history that she was a widow. We are familiar with applications to a court of justice for leave to presume the death of persons who have vanished. But the French judge was not to be so easily persuaded as our courts. The wife was in her official history a wife and there was no certificate to justify her appellation being changed to widow. Without a certificate or reasonable documentary evidence no man obviously ought to die.

There was a way round. The bereaved woman applied for a divorce on the ground of desertion. Since death is beyond dispute the most complete kind of desertion, the court of Montreuil decided that she could not be denied. So the widow is recognized as an independent woman and apparently both the law and she are satisfied. But you will observe that the official history must now record the wife of a dead man as a divorcee, which does not seem very creditable to official history.
