REBEL MAY FIGHT REBEL Carranza Reported to Be Headed For Juarez to Discipline Villa.

A story is in circulation in El Paso, Tex., that the breach between General Francisco Villa, leader of the rebels in northern Mexico, and Venustiano Carranza is irreparable.

As the story goes it is Carranza's plan to seize Juarez and set up his capital there. Villa prefers to remain near the border until he knows more definitely about the situation.

Men who have arrived here from the west coast of Mexico, where Carranza was last heard from, declare that Carranza is coming across the mountains accompanied by several thousand men.

Carranza does not anticipate a battle, it is said, but believes that by being a superior force, Villa will readily recognize him and that further conflict will be avoided.

TREASURER OF STATE A SUICIDE

J. John J. Kennedy of New York Dies by Own Hand CUTS HIS THROAT WITH RAZOR

John J. Kennedy, state treasurer of New York, committed suicide at the Markey hotel, Buffalo. He was found in a small lavatory of the hotel.

His jugular vein had been severed. Temporary insanity induced by worry over his impending appearance before a New York grand jury where District Attorney Charles S. Whitman has been conducting a John Doe graft inquiry.

In this statement Mr. Dirnberger told Mr. Kennedy's appearance before Mr. Whitman on Jan. 29 at which time Mr. Kennedy signed a waiver of immunity. Later Mr. Whitman gave out a statement to the effect that Mr. Kennedy had ignored an invitation from him to appear before the grand jury so the state treasurer was suspended.

H. P. Burgard, Democratic state committeeman and large canal contractor now residing at Fulton, N. Y., has been a life long friend of Kennedy's.

CAPTAIN FIRST TO LEAVE SHIP

Johnson of the Monroe Jumped Into Boat No. 1 FACTS OF DISASTER COME OUT

Skipper Defends His Action at Government Inquiry Into Sea Disaster. Only Two Boats and Raft Get Away.

What means Captain Edward E. Johnson of the steamship Monroe took to avoid the collision with the steamship Nantucket off the Virginia coast, in which forty-one persons were lost, and what efforts he made to save the lives of passengers and crew were among the things inquired into at the trial in Philadelphia of Captain Osmyn Berry, commander of the Nantucket, who is charged with negligence.

Captain Johnson said that because of the heavy list to starboard after the collision only two boats could be launched. One was commanded by himself, Captain Johnson said, and the other by the chief officer. He testified that his boat cleared the Monroe a little before the other boat. He admitted he left the ship with knowledge there were other persons in the vessel, but that he wanted to go around the stern to the port side, where he could save them.

He took aboard a colored woman passenger and a white man, also a passenger, and rowed away from the ship. In the meantime he admitted he had ignored a big life raft, capable of holding twenty-six persons. This was lashed to the deck within fifteen feet of the boat he was helping to launch.

"I had no time to touch the raft," he said. The first mate cleared lifeboat No. 7 later and also left the ship. Some sailors, however, cut the lashings of the life raft, passed up by Captain Johnson, and it got away with four persons clinging to it. Only those two boats and that one life raft of eight boats and six rafts left the vessel.

Captain Johnson explained that it was impossible to launch boats 2, 4, 6 and 8, all located on the port or left side, because the steamer was so badly listed. Captain Johnson surprised those at the trial by declaring that "under the circumstances" neither he nor Captain Berry could have avoided the collision.

"I can figure no course of action owing to the shortness of time and my lack of the knowledge of the course of the Nantucket that could have prevented the collision," said Captain Johnson. "Nor do I see how Captain Berry could have done anything to avoid the collision after he realized the proximity of the Monroe."

To many questions why he did not cut loose all the life rafts the witness replied he was very busy trying to get the boats away. Every person he saw on the decks or in the water, Captain Johnson said, had on a life preserver with the exception of himself.

The Nantucket stood a quarter of a mile astern of the Monroe, the witness said, and did "remarkably well in helping to save passengers and crew."
