Joseph Black's Trial.
The trial at Clarion of Joseph Black of Marienville for the killing of Jerome Weaver, at the Hoover barn near Tyersburg, on the night of November 1st last, created much interest in the community in which both men had been well known. The jury's verdict of manslaughter was arrived at after about three hours' deliberation.

One of the principal witnesses was Charles Weaver, the 11-year-old son of the dead man. His testimony was as follows:

Jerome Weaver is my father. I am 11 years old. He came home between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening of Nov. 1st, 1913. We were doing eating our supper. Catherine, Elnora, myself and mother were at home. Father was growling that the supper wasn't good. Father ran after mother with an eating fork. Didn't hear her say anything. After my mother and sisters ran out of the house father said he was going out to kill "the pot gut." He was cross to me that night. I couldn't make up with him any way. He kicked me, but not very hard; didn't hurt me. Told me to button my shoes to go to the barn. We went into the lower part of the barn. Father had a lantern. We went up into the barn then. Black had fork sticking in corn on wagon. Father walked back and forth on barn floor and swore. He said, "Joe, you wronged me; death on hands." He struck him and pushed him back. Had lantern in hands. When Mr. Black came down to house he said he had hurt pap. We went over to Billy Hook's. Stayed there until Mr. Black and Mr. Hook came back. My mamma didn't go up to barn. I didn't after we came back because I was afraid. Mr. Black had been staying at our house for about three years. When they baled were there Black and father had trouble. They were fighting. That was about two weeks before fight in barn. First time Black knocked father down Father told Black to leave. When he was about to leave called him back.

Cross examined: Father acted as if he had been drinking when he came home the evening of Nov. 1. He was going to stick mother with a table fork. Elnora cried out. That evening father said at supper table that he would kill mother. Black on porch when father came. Out at barn when father was chasing mother. Father said at supper table "God help me to kill that pot gut."

Black's own story of the fight is in part as follows: "I had been hauling corn into the barn on the N. F. Hoover farm, where Jerome Weaver lived, and after supper took a lantern and went to the barn to unload the corn that I might have the wagon to haul hay with in the morning. Weaver had been away and came home under the influence of liquor and while I was in the barn I heard him saying that he was going to come up and kill me, but paid no attention to him. Upon entering the barn floor, he said, 'Joe, you have wronged me,' began swearing and struck me three times on the breast, knocking me up against the corn which was standing on the floor; he drew up a lantern as if to hit me over the head with it; I got scared and hit him over the head with a manure fork, knocking him down. Weaver started to get up and I hit him again; then he started to crawl toward me on his hands and knees; I was afraid he would catch me by the legs and I hit him again. That was the time I think I caved his skull in for he did not get up again."

Dr. J. M. Hess, who assisted Dr. F. V. Phillips perform an autopsy, had with him the skull of Weaver and showed the jury the number of pieces into which it had been broken. There were 18 large and a number of smaller ones, about 25 in all.

BOTH HELD ON MURDER CHARGE
George Strain and Wife Given Hearing Before Justice Clark Monday.—Large Array of Witnesses Are Heard.

Monday, at the court house, before Justice D. W. Clark, a hearing was given George W. Strain and wife on the charge of stabbing Albert Allen to death at a point of the road leading from Fagundus to Nelltown, near what is known as Gorman Hill, Harmony township, on the 22 day of March, an account of which was given in these columns last week. There was quite a large array of witnesses present from the vicinity of the tragedy and with the spectators quite filled the large court room. District Attorney M. A. Carringer conducted the case for the Commonwealth, and A. C. Brown of Tionesta, and W. J. and E. C. Breene of Oil City, represented the defendants, both of whom were present. Strain is undersized in stature and weight, about 30 years of age, with rather sharp features, and weighs about 135 pounds. Mrs. Strain is also undersized, delicate in appearance, weighing little if any over 100 pounds, and is aged 28 years. Her maiden name was Adda Winger. They have been married 14 years and have five children ranging in age from two to thirteen years.

J. L. Glenn, who conducts the boarding house at Hunter's Camp, was the main witness. He said George Strain came to his house about 4 o'clock; seemed under the influence of liquor. He asked me to help get Allen out of the woods, who, he said, had been cut with a knife. Strain came alone and on foot. He told me that "Allen tried to drag my wife out of the sled and she cut him with the knife." C. D. Miller, Strain and myself went after Allen. Found him lying or partly sitting in an old conductor hole, or oil well location, 20 rods from the Gorman Hill road, and three-fourths of a mile from Hunter camp. Allen was wounded in left leg, with knife thrust clear through the thigh near the hip, and another cut in the back on left side. The ground where he was found was steep and snow was tramped down for a rod around, as if in a struggle; blood was scattered for a rod both above and below the conductor hole. There were three tracks leading from main road to the place, two men tracks and a smaller or woman's tracks. Took Allen home on a load of hay that happened along on the main road was reached. Mr. Glenn was on the load holding Allen on. Wm. Shreckler was driving. Glenn asked Allen who did the cutting and Allen said "Strain cut me." I asked him what Strain? and he said "George Strain." Allen was conscious when he told me, and he said "I am cut and am dying." Allen's clothing is still at my house. Mrs. Strain came to my house about two minutes before Strain. I was cleaning my gun and revolver, and she said, "for God's sake put those guns away. Don't let George see them, he is drunk." Afterwards George Strain told what had gone on and his wife sided in with him, Mr. Glenn testified.

This was to the effect that Allen had tried to drag his wife out of the sled and she cut him.

Mrs. Glenn, wife of the boarding-house keeper testified that Mrs. Strain's waist and dress were torn, and her hair disarranged, and she said Allen had done it, and she had cut him. Mrs. Glenn said that Mrs. Strain afterward told her she (Mrs. Strain) had not cut Allen.

Thomas Tucker, who keeps a store at Tru-sville testified that Strain and wife had been in his store and purchased some groceries on the morning of the tragedy. Allen got off the train and the party had started for home shortly after 11 o'clock, the two men walking up the hill and the woman driving the team. Strain had come to his place to butcher some hogs, but the weather being too cold the hogs were not slaughtered. Strain showed him a big butcher knife, which Tucker identified as the one she had secured at the lumbering camp.

Mrs. Henry Hall lives at Fagundus and saw Strain and wife and Allen passing through on their way toward home. Sheriff Hood went to Hunter's Camp on the morning of the 3d of March, after the tragedy, and placed the Strains under arrest. He also visited the scene of the tragedy, and described the evidences he found. He found blood and evidences of a struggle 40 feet farther down the hill from where Allen had lain when found. He inquired for the knife and was told that it was at Sam Strain's house, brother of George. He went there and found Mrs. Eli Strain, who is the mother of the Strain men. She told him the knife was not in the house, but when he insisted that he must have it, the lady went outside and got it out of the snow.

C. D. Miller, Wm. Soeckler, E. B. Head, Clarence Rounds, Sam. Kilmessner, Mr. Stoneberg, and Mrs. Gertrude Allen, the widow of the murdered man, were sworn, their testimony being in corroboration of what had already been testified to.

At the conclusion of the hearing, which lasted from 11 until 5 o'clock, Justice Clark decided that since the evidence had not made it clear which of the accused had actually done the stabbing, he would, under the circumstances, be obliged to hold both for trial. They were accordingly remanded to the care of Sheriff Hood, under the charge of jointly murdering Albert Allen.

To the Housewife.
Madam, if your husband is like most men he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effectual, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers. adv.
