Charles Pope Badly Injured.

Charles Pope of Keliettville was seriously injured while engaged at the yard of the Salmon Creek mill Thursday last, A heavy stick of timber fell on his foot and threw him to the ground with such force as to break his collar bone and dislocate the shoulder joint. He was rendered unconscious for a time by the impact and it was feared his injuries might have a fatal termination. He was removed to his home where physicians sttended him and made him as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. Although still suffering great pain from both his crushed foot and injured shoulder, his recovery is no longer in doubt, yet it will be weeks before he is able to resume his work. cape from instant death Fire totally destroyed the newly installed power house of the Deible Oil Co., at McGraw, back of Tidioute Friday night last. The plant had been in operation less than two weeks, the building being constructed of pine lumber. It is thought the fire was caused by backfire in the carburetor which ignited a small gasoline tank causing an explosion, When the pumper, David Stewart, discovered the fire the whole inside of the building was sflame, balking all efforts to save any part of the tools or machinery, thus entailing a total loss upon the company, which is composed of Mesars. G. G. Gaston, and J. W. Landers of Tionesta, and W. G. Wyman of Erie. They estimate the loss to be fully $500. #### Dwelling Twice Struck In 20 Minutes.

The dwelling house of Ferd, Wenk on his farm two miles out the German Hill road, was twice struck by lightning durng the severe electric storm Thursday afternoon. Shortly after one o'clock, while Mr. Wenk was in the barn, which he had a few moments before opened to admit mail carrier John Cunningham with his rig to shelter them from the storn, a vivid flash of lightning and a sharp report came almost simultaneously. The men looked out of the barn door but saw no evidence of a stroke in either the barn or the house. Twenty minutes later a similar flash and crash came, and then Mr. Wenk went to the house to find that both bolts had taken effect on the house. The first followed the chimney, cosening the bricks and filled the sitting oom with a cloud of soot and ashes, damaging the wall paper and about every article of furniture and bric-a-brac in the room. The second bolt followed the southeast corner of the kitchen addition to the building from near the eaves to within a couple feet of the ground, loosening a portion of the siding and knocking quite a patch of plaster off the inside, but in neither case did fire ensue.

Mrs. Wenk was lying on the couch in the sitting room when the storm broke but had risen and gone into the kitchen when the first crash came, and she was not affected by it, but when the second bolt struck she was considerably shocked, but almost immediately recovered. This rather unusual occurrence affords another evidence of the fallacy of the old adage that "lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

Pirates started out like sure winners getting in three good solid shots in the first round, but in these days of war our boys did not scare at that and came right back with four in their half. After that the Pirates did not get dangerous but they did throw a scare into us in the seventh when they rallied strongly and scored twice. We scored again in the second, fourth and seventh, and the victory was ours. The hitting and fielding features were about even, Hepler and Mohnkern each allowing ten hits and having twelve and ten strike outs respectively. Grove, who relieved Hepler for a half inning, gave no hits and struck out two. Tionesta plays Snydersburg here next Saturday at 3:15. #### Dr. Siggins, Marooned In London, Has Tough Time Getting Home.

[Oil City Blizzard, Monday.] "Now, I know what war is." That was the remark of Mayor . 3. Sigrins, as he alighted from the Washington sleeper this morning at 11 o'clock, after over a week's roughing it on the way from London here.

Dr. Siggins said the scenes in London baffled description. Everybody is war mad and suspicious of every one else. The plight of thousands of Americans, who are stranded there, most of them without a cent, is pitiable indeed, and the problem of existence, until some relief can be afforded them, is staring them in the face. English gold is the only purchasing medium, and travelers' checks and similar paper, possesed by most of the Americans, is absolutely useless. Food is hard to get, even with English money, and the hotels are all as practically shut down as they are in Oil City, as most of the help there is foreign and immediately, on the reports of war. departed in haste.

When the big crash came, along with the nnouncement of war, Dr. Siggins, in addition to his travelers' checks, had half a pound in English gold. All the banks shut automatically, and remained shut, Dr. Siggins was forced to make his half pound to far as it would. After that was gone he nvoluntarily fasted for about three days. Dr. Siggins was staying at the Waverly, one of the largest hotels in London, and in re ponse to an inquiry as to where somethin to eat might be had, the manager answered that he did not know, but Mr. Siggins could ook around and forage for himself.

Everything and anything can be seize by the government without enumeration or explanation. Dr. Siggins saw all sort of vehicles and horses seized, and at one time was planning to go out into the country when he heard a commotion below and beheld soldiers leading 30 horses out of the stables of the hotel.

The American Express company did wonders towards alleviating the suffering of the distressed Americans by cashing their paper for English gold, giving as much as hey could for it. At first the limit was $40 but later dropped to $20. Dr. Siggins said the lines of Americans waiting for this aid were blocks in length, and that he often stood for hours in this line hoping to get a chance to cash some of his paper.

The Great Eastern railroad, of England, s managed by an American, who did all ne could towards helping the stranded toursts. In addition to carrying them, be caused notices to be posted in every hotel that the American Express company would cash the travelers' checks.

To be seen with a camera in London, or o be taking more than casual interest in anything, military or otherwise, places a foreigner under the surveillance of a shadow almost immediately. An American who wanted a picture of the docks at London, snapped them, and when he turned around he found a bayonet tickling his nose. He had a hard time proving that he was not a spy.

Dr. Siggins related another instance When a woman doctor of their party, who spoke French, translated a telegram from English into French, for a Frenchman, who had discovered in some way that the lady spoke French. Next day she read in one of the London newspapers an account of the execution of a spy and his description tallied exactly with the man for whom the translation was made. Ten thousand American tourists left Lon-

Ion on Saturday, August 15, some with baggage and more without. Mayor Sigrins was aboard the St. Louis and said that the struggles of the frantic Americans to get aboard were terrible. Wives were separated from their husbands and families were torn apart. In one instance which came and she was aboard the boat, without a cent of money and ignorant of his whereabouts. Another instance took place where a wo man had only enough money for her passage to the States, and about to get aboard when it was discovered that her baby had measles. Weeping she was led back and must go to a London hospital until the child has recovered.

Conditions on board ship were terrible Dr. Siggins came across in the steerage and the very was greatly overloaded. Accommodate were to be had for 1,000 at most, including the crew, and 1,200 were crowded aboard the craft. The crew was entirely green, all the seasoned hands having been seized by the naval authorities. Had a fire occurred the entire shipload would have perished, as the purser told Dr. Siggins that the crew could not even get one of the lifeboats over the side, let alone enough to save the passengers. The stewards and pursers were in collusion, and graft was the rule of the hour. Exhorbitant prices were charged for everything and the passenger of the first-class were barefacedly robbed by these officers. The food in the steerage was rank and most of the passengers there had to pass it up. Once in a while, at the eginning of the voyage one of the firstclass passengers would appear with a roast duck or other delicacy. Instantly he was surrounded by a horde of fellow passengers who begged for little piece of the tempting morsel. Dr. Siggins said that often h dreamed of the big meal he was going to have just as soon as he reached New York. Ironically enough, upon his arrival he los is appetite, and has not recovered it yet. dieting to reduce weight. The return trip alone cost the doctor 20 pounds, and now he is wiser in the lore of theory versu

The Atlantic is full of English cruiser and Dr. Siggins sighted 15 of them coming over.
