Dicd,

On Sunday evening, the 11th inst., in the 19th year of his age, JAMES EDWARD, second son of Dr. J. Tallmadge, of Candor, N. Y. 'He came, like a dream in the dawn of life,

He fled, like a shadow before its noon.' Thus quickly has passed from earth to the spirit world, one, who in the spring time of life, upon whom were lavished many fond hopes and affections. Truly, in this instance, has death singled out "a shining mark;" for upon his youthful form, nature had convened more than her usual charms of loveliness.

Endowed with mental faculties of no ordinary mould, he excrted himself with unceasing perseverance, in the acquirement of an education, in different Academies, for nearly three years, and the success which attended his efforts was such, as to inspire in the bosom of his friends, the hope, that his future course would be one of usefulness and honor.

But Consumption did its work of ruin, and the wild winds now chant a mournful requiem over the lonely couch of his sepulchral sleep, regardless of the once exalted worth of him that slumbers beneath, and who but a short time since was rejoicing in the full bloom and vigor of health, and enjoyed prospects as bright and flattering for a long and happy life as any who are left to mourn their untimely loss.

During his illness though it was severe, he was never heard to complain. The true spirit of submission to the will of Heaven was manifested at all times, and deep penitence for his sins exhibited, till he finally obtained that evidence of his acceptance with God, which lifted him above the fear-of death and enabled him to triumph in the hour of his approaching dissolution with a joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Thus may it be said of him as it was of the admired and lamented Kirk White, of whose character he seemed largely to partake:

"Oft genius carly quits this sod, Impatient of a robe of clay;

Spread the bright pinion, spurns the clod,

And smiles, and soars, and steals away. "But more than genius urged thy flight, And marked the way, dear youth! for thee

EDWARD sprang up to worlds of light On wings of immortality."
