WEALTH OF ANCIENT GREAT MEN.

Croesus had an estate equal to £1,700,000, besides a scarcely less amount in money, slaves, and furniture. The philosopher Seneca had a property valued at £3,000,000, and Lentulus, the friend of Cicero, was said to be worth £3,500,000. The Emperor Tiberius left at his death above £23,500,000, which Caligula, his successor, succeeded in squandering in less than a year. Caesar, before he had been promoted to any high office, owned nearly £3,000,000. Apicius spent in dissipation £500,000, and finding, on looking into his affairs, that he had only £800,000, he poisoned himself, not regarding the sum as sufficient for his maintenance.—Cleopatra gave to Anthony a diamond worth £800,000. Caligula on one dinner spent £80,000. The ordinary expense for a dinner of Lucullus was £200,000. Messala bought a house of Anthony for £400,000. The fishes in the fish pond of Lucullus were sold at £35,000.

GOOD LUCK.

Some young men talk about luck. Good luck is to get up at six o'clock in the morning; good luck, if you had only a shilling a week, is to live on eleven pence and save a penny; good luck is to trouble your heads with your own business, and let your neighbors' alone; good luck is to fulfil the commandments, and do unto others as we wish them to do unto us. They must not only plod but persevere. Pence must be taken care of because they are the seeds of guineas. To get on in the world they must take care of home, sweep their own doorway clean, try and help other people, avoid temptations, and have faith, and truth, and God. —Faire's Lecture.

☞In Bradley county, Tennessee, a temporary hanging was resorted to by a rebel captain named McClellan, to induce Union men to volunteer into the Confederate service. In Boone county, in the same State, the property of Union men known to be in the Federal army was seized, and their wives required to get bills of divorcement before it could be recovered. Several ladies affected to procure such bills, and actually obtained a release of their property by the expedient.
