Northern Virginia Abandoned. WASHINGTON, November 24.—The N. Y. Times' army correspondent, writing from Sigel's headquarters, Nov. 24th, says:—Such information has been received at these headquarters this afternoon as leaves no doubt that the entire Northern portion of Virginia has been abandoned by the rebel troops. There are a few white guerillas roaming about Leesburg, Mount Gilead, Martinsburg and vicinity. Jackson has gone towards Richmond.

Tumbling Down Again.

The Philadelphia Ledger says :-Petroleum oil, which rose so rapidly from twenty-five cents a gallon to a dollar and ten cents, has taken the back track again, and is down, as reported, to sixty cents. The rise was merely speculative, and somebody will make or lose fortunes by the sudden fluctuation.

The Price of Philadelphia Newspapers Raised.

The newspaper proprietors of Philadelphia had a meeting in that city yesterday, looking to the protection of their interests, in view of the heavy advance in the price of paper, materials, etc. They decided to raise the price of subscriptions to their papers in order to enable them to continue their publication.

GOOD FOR PRINCE JOHN.-John Van Buren speaks of his military experience as follows: "Now, fellow-citizens, I never have made any claim to military experience. To state the matter as strongly as I can, I may cafely admis that I am as profoundly ignorant of military matters as any Brigadier General that has been recently appointed."

Little Belle was just three years old, when, as she was one day riding with her uncle near the bank of a river, so thickly shaded with trees that only occasional glimpses could be caught of it, she, supposing there were several rivers there, exclaimed, "I wonder which of those rivers is mamma to my brook, that runs by our house?"
