OUR WESTERN SUBSORIBERS MUST SETTLE UP.

Our subscribers in the West must settle their accounts. Many have done so, but a great many have not. All who fail to pay up by the IST OF APRIL NEXT, will have their papers discontinued and their ascounts put in course of immediate collection. We neither print for glory nor fun, and it is time our distant patrons understood this. We shall not again remind them of it.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

There will be a meeting of the Democracy of Morris township, Greene County, held at Nineveh, in said township, on Saturday, 28th of Feb., 1863, for the purpose of forming a Club, drafting resolutions, etc. MANY DEMOCRATS.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

With a great many men, party politics consist of a system of tricks. To get and keep office is the same-total of their effort and ambition, and to circumvent their darling aim, they are "all things to all men and nothing long." They "stoop to conquer,"-they descend to every species of deceit and meanness,—they know how to "smile, and smile, and be a villain" still. They sacrifice their manhood, their sincerity, truth, honor, integrity, everything that makes real nobility of character, in thier greedy pursuit of office and gain .-They profess friendship for everybody, particularly for other office-seekers who have votes at their command. They "bargain and sell," and trade off the voters they control, or think they control, like sheep in the shambles. Having no settled politcal principles, -no other attachment for the party with which they claim to be identified than that which springs from the hope of pay and preferment, it is matter of little difference to them who they strike hands with, or who they sell themselves to.

Through the disgraceful, mercenary and kind, honest men, and men of modest, but vices of their gallant kinsman. undoubted merit and capability, are too rarely able to secure a nomination. Some one of this pliant and hypocritical genofficial capacity, whether it pays twenty dollars a year or a thousand. If qualified and is in the words following, to wit: for the places they seek, well; if not, it makes little difference: they are in the Clipper. "ring," have done yeoman service for their fellow-aspirants and fellow-sinners.

candor and reliability of other men .- | quoted above. They are so accustomed to the practice of dissimulation themselves, that they expect little else than duplicity from others, and, indeed, are disappointed when they encounter anything but a hypocrisy as consummate as their own, and as cunning and calculating.

The class we refer to are a positive infliction on any political party, and their is so limited as to forbid it as a gentactics and course invariably damage the eral thing. In many counties, on account of the intrigues and chicanery of this class of matter. politicians, and the disgraceful means they employ to insure success, good and true men are often restrained from offering themselves as candidates. The consequence is, that the public are served, in arrest and gone on duty. It is further has been "played out," The Adjutant many instances, by incompetent and neg-stated they have been allowed to elect General has issued a general order religent, if not dishonest officers. The rem-'edy for the evils we speak of is with the people, and they ought to apply it. ## COLONEL MINOR MILLIKEN.

This gallant and accomplished officer, Colonel of the First Regiment of Ohio Cavalry, lost his life in a desperate, but successful charge on the enemy's centre at the terrible battle of Muríreesboro. It the third charge he had led in person, and it pierced the rebel lines; "but the right and left supporting regiments failing to drive the foe, the First was speedily flanked. It was at this point, while occupying an exposed position, that a squad of the enemy made a bold dash distinctly to capture him. They reached and surrounded him. The demand for his surrender was made; but though one of his men cried out, "Oh, Colonel do give up, they'll kill you," it was answered only by the heavy swinging of the Colonel's sabre. With a cut to the rear, one assailant was cloven down, and with a stroke to the front another; but just as valor seemed ready to be crowned by success, the fatal shot was fired. The ball, supposed to be from a carbine, entered the neck and severed the jugular vein. Unconsciousness must have immediately ensued. The body was recovered within thirty minutes (stripped of overcoat, saber and valuables while in the throcs of death) and life ended with one gasp as it was committed to the ambulance. Thus was death met and braved by as lofty courage as ever inspired a soldier, whether the records of this war or others be searched."

Col. Milliken was not only a daring and intrepid soldier, but a gentleman in the highest acceptation of the term; and, what is better still, a Christian. His services began with the first campaign in ed himself by his courage, fidelity and energy, and won the favor and encomiums of his superiors and the love of his men.-The country has lost no truer or braver fore,

The Philadelphia Evening Journal was suppressed on the 28th ult., and its proprietor arrested by the military authorities.

On the morning of the 29th, Judge Ludlow, a dispatch to the Pittsburgh Chronicle states, "sent for the Grand Jury of Philadelphia, and reviewed the arrest of the proprietor of the Evening Journal, and the suppression of that paper. He declared that such action was illegal, and directed the grand jury to summon before them Gen. Montgomery, military comder at Philadelphia, and Captain Finney, provost marshal, to testify. The Journal office is still in the hands of the provost guard. The military witnesses summoned will probably not appear."
