The Democratic party is not a tempo rary organization, seeking to effect trifling and evanescent objects. It is a progressive and permanent organization, and will only cease to exist with the liberal popular institutions which gave it origin. It came into being in the very infancy of the Republic, when our finances were disordered, our credit impaired, our material interests undeveloped, and our public policy unsettled. Under its fostering careour great industrial interests "sprang into prosperous life,"-our commerce was spread over every sea, and our territories extended from ocean to ocean. During the long era of its rule, two foreign wars were successfully prosecuted and gloriously terminated without infractions of the Constitution, or assaults on the personal liberty of the citizen. The American name was everywhere respected and her people everywhere protected in their persons, property and privileges .-The acts of our rulers were at all times freely and fully canvased, and the villainies and peculations of public officers everywhere boldly exposed and unsparingly denounced. In a word, we were the tion on the face of earth. And for all the benefits and blessings we enjoyed we were indebted, under God, to the sound policy of Democratic administrations not less than to our institutions themselves. Our wonderful growth in wealth, numbers and importance was the legitimate fruit of public measures which looked not to the advantage of one class to the detriment of another, nor to the up That Purviance has "torn up some half a building of the interests of one section to dozen of his veto messages which he had the tearing down of those of another .- prepared for transmission to the Legisla-The patriotism of the party was broad as ture"—that Gov.
