

Mount Ararat.

Mount Ararat is 6,000 feet higher than Etna, and 1528 feet higher than Mount Blanc—the latter the point of greatest elevation in Europe. It is detached from the other mountains of Armenia, and is divided into two conical peaks. Sir Robert Porter paints, in glowing colors, the magnificence of the spectacle when he first came in sight of Ararat, majestically rising from a widely extended green plain, fertilized by the clear waters of the Aras (the ancient Araxes), and covered with Armenian villages. In various points of view the summit has a striking resemblance to a ship—a fact which has been recorded by all travelers to the spot, and the whole country around is full of traditional stories relative to Noah's ark and the flood.

It is a common belief among the Armenians and Persians, that the remains of the ark still exist on the summit. Several attempts have been made to reach the top of the mountain, but rarely have any such attempts succeeded. Moving sands which threaten to overwhelm the traveler, flinty roads which cut his shoes to shreds, terrible precipices, with overhanging rocks, and, above all, nests of snakes, have constantly struck terror into the stoutest hearts, and, in nearly all cases, induced the abandonment of the enterprise. At Erivan the Armenians show the spot where Noah first planted the vine, and the town of Nakhjovann (place of descent) is believed to mark the spot where the Patriarch first settled on quitting the ark.

The ter-centenary of the death of Calvin is to be celebrated at Geneva on the 29th of May, 1864. This three hundredth anniversary will be celebrated in one of the principal churches.

An exchange says that an American lady fainted while being presented to Empress Eugenia in Paris, and that the latter was delighted at the compliment.
