DR, VANCE ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.—We earn from the Philadelphia Inquirer of recent date that Dr. C. L. Vance attempted suicide in the penitentiary.

The unfortunate man felt his degradation keenly when he was putting on the convict's uniform. He trembled very much, and with evident emotion declared that his fate was a hard one. "On the stand in his cell Dr. Vance had left a note addressed to Warden Townsend, requesting the latter to telegraph to the writer's mother asking her to have his body taken to his former home and buried beside the remains of his father. Beside this was a letter which Dr. Vance had written and addressed to his mother, and which showed strongly that he had firmly made up his mind to blot out, by ending his life, the foul stain of disgrace that destroyed all his hopes and made his days miserable.
