On Sunday afternoon the jury after being out forty-five hours returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, which seals the fate of the unfor tunate man. The Baltimore American says: "The one staggering fact which has always confronted us is Udderzook's excellent character. No man in the city of Baltimore occupying his position in life, stood better in the estimation or those who knew him. He seemed to be a man incapable of committing a crime. In a dark hour some fatal madness must have overtaken him and led him into the conspiracy against the Insurance companies, and then the hope of gain led him to destruction."

Mr. Entron — Allow me to say a faw words in behalf of one of Franklin coun-ties greatest sons, who having met with a temporary check in his career, is now being slandered by that class of persons who are always eager to pluck the hard-carned laurels from the brow of fame. I have reference to Col. THOMAS A. SCOTT, Vice-President of the great Pennsylvania dollars. Railroad.

This gentleman was a boy in your midst, and many of your citizens no doubt giving often call to mind his boyhood struggles Christmas will come or and endeavors. Even then, you remember, he postered traits of character which endeared him to you, and some of you, at least, then discovered in the noble boy the germs which afterward developed in to greatness and usefulness to the State and nation at large. You have followed him in his subsequent career with pride vastness of his undertakings and the wonderfel genius he displayed in the calling to which his life was devoted. His name long since became a household word in every home in the land, and his fame as a successful railroad operator is worldwide. He has shown that he does not belong to that class of slothful and indifferent beings who believe in hiding away their talents in napkins, and burying on the contrary, Col. Scott used every talent bestowed upon him to the best advantage-not, as many feign to believe. for his own personal advantage simplybut for the good and prosperity of his own State—aye, not only for his own State, but for the development and advancement of the whole country. For wonderful energies to the development of the vast hidden resources of his own State by means of great railroad projects; but something to the country at large as well, he accepted the Presidency of a great railroad enterprise, involving the benefit ern latitudes, the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. On the success of this great undertaking he pledged his credit and staked his private fortune." But more money was needed than the private fortunes of a few men could furnish, and failing to raise it on the bonds of the company, failure came. His name was on paper that went to protest, and, like thousands of enterprising men in these panicky times, he is temporarily under a cloud. That is all. This is the sum and substance of his offending. The ardor and enthusiasm of character impelled him to strike out of the old beaten paths and keep pace with (if not, like Talleyrand, ten minutes ahead) the progress of the age. No wonder he has enemies (all great and

INDIAN SUMMER .- "Indian Summer" which it is supposed was once a fixed date and fact, seems now, if we may judge by the diverse opinions respecting it. to be a "moveable feast;" moveable according to the ideas or opinions of those who speak of it. Some place it in October, some at the first, and some at the middle or last of November. Watson in his annals says: "Indian Summer was a short season of mild, fine weather, which was formerly much more manifest than of later years. It was expected to occur in the last days of November. It was a bland and genial time, in which the birds. the insects and the plants felt a new creation, and sported a short-lived summer ere they shrunk finally from the rigor of Winter's blast. The sky in the meantime was always thinly veiled in a murky haze, intercepting the direct rays of the sun, yet passing enough of life and heat to prevent sensations of gloom and chill."
