Vitimate Effects of Guarie.

The great value of guano as an application to worn or exhausted soils is very generally conceded, especially when used in giving poor land a start, so that a course of rotation and cropping can be commenced with encouraging results. But further observation and experience are needed to show whether it can be depended upon year after year for the fertilizing of the farm, the same as barn yard monure. We find this subject started in the Piedmont (Va.) Whig, a paper | self and children, was asked how she was containing editorial articles of value to the agriculturist. It is well known that guano has been the great manure for the renovation of the exhausted soils of that section, and that its use and value is probably better understood there than elsewhere in the country.

The law of action and reaction is applicable to the soil, as well as to all else in nature. "Everything stimulated or excited to an unusual degree of action, must suffer a corresponding depression after the excitement is to have an active, stimulating effect, perceived the town for assistance, especially by native almost immediately in the increased growth citizens, as compared with-former years, of the products of the soil to which it is applied. This is illustrated, and also its ultimain results, in a case mentioned by Liebig, and referred to by our authority. The vinegrowers of one of one of the principal Rhine wine reigons made a discovery by means of which they doubled their crop of grapes.

Unfortunately, in a year or two, their specific not only failed to accomplish the purpose expected, but their crops dwindled away almost to nothing. They had stimulated their vines by manuring them with shaving of horn, which contains a large quantity of ammonia; and when the reaction came, the product fell as far below the medium standard as it had for a year or two been sabove it. The vines, too, were permanently injured by this treatment, and were never restored to their original condition. Another case is related of a Virginia gardener who, when guano was first introduced, made a trial of it upon some rose bushes.

"The consequence was such a development of flowers as no one had ever seen before. The trees were loaded with a profusion of roses, of the finest quality. But it soon became manifest that it was only a temporary excitement, soon to be succeeded by a corresponding depression. The trees never recovered fully from the shock which they had received, and some of them perished out-

From this it would appear that on perennial plants, the continual application of guano produces very injurious effects in the end, but these effects would probably be much less on annuals, renewed from year to year, like the grain crops. But still some results must be produced, and this it should be made the object of careful experiment to ascertain.

There can be no question, however, of the importance of this manure to the country, and everything going to show how it can best be employed, and giving a bester understanding of the results which may be expected, will be of value. - Rural New Yorker.

Trimming Apple Trees.

Apple trees may be trimmed in any month in the year, provided no large limbs are cut atill we prefer May and June to other months, because the trees are then growing, and the wounds are sooner covered

You need not fear their bleeding when the leaf is out, for leaves take up the sap as fast as it is made. You will find that a grape vine does not bleed on being trimmed after the leaf comes out

One great error of orchardists should be corrected. They neglect to trim annually. At length, finding the trees bear but little fruit, and that the limbs are too close and interfering with each other, a great onslaught is made. Large limbs are cut, and large wounds are produced. All this arises from a neglect of annual trimming. For when this is attended to, no large limbe need cutting. You never should cut a limb that is more than an inch in diameter, and then you need no plaster to cover the wound. In healthy trees the cut will be closed up within two years, and there is no danger of rot.

But you may say you have now an orchard that has been long neglected, and you must prune thoroughly in order to make it beat. No. Let the large limbs alone; you never help a neglected tree by cutting large limbs. Thin out the smaller shoots, and let the old limbs alone. By cutting, you run the risk o produceing more rotten wood than

When you trim a tree, take care and not wound the limbs that you stand on-and let no man climb up a tree with heavy boots or shoes He will do more mischief with the nails in his boots, than service in thinning the branches Thin shoes or slippers may be used on climbing a tree, either to trim or to gather frun .- Mass. Ploughman.

IMPROVED WAY OF MAKING WHEAT BREAD .- The Paris correspondent of the Commercial Advertiser speaks of a plan invented by a baker of that city to reduce the cost of bread. He puts in one part of rice to five of wheat flour, and the economy effected reaches the very considerable figure of one sou in the two pound loaf. The government has had the bread examined by competent persons, and has authorized the sale of it, at a less rate than fixed by the police.-The demand is such that the baker cannot supply it. Neither the nutriment nor the taste of the bread would appear to be affected by the presence of the new ingredient.

A GOOD SOAP RECIPE.—Have the ley of sufficient strength to float an egg; measure it into barrels as obtained, and to each gallon add one pound of grease. Stir every day until it becomes thick; then, to sixteen gal. lons of this soft soap put four gallons of ley, as strong as that above. Boil one hour or more, until the grease entirely disappears; then dissolve six quarts of salt in four gallons of water; sur it in, and boil the whole filteen merces longer; pour it into tubs to harrien a now in bars and dry in the sh i le

WASH FOR FREET TREES .- I have often found the following a certain antidote for insects, or fungus, on vines and fruit trees :-1 lb. sulphur, 2 lbs. soft soap, I gallon tobacco water, and 2 gallons lime water; mix, to naint over all the wood,

Results of the Maine Law.

In conversation, a few days since, with one of our city coal dealers, about the number of destitute persons supplied this winter with coal, by the town, he remarked that the number would have been much larger but for the Maine Law. Among other families helped last year by the town, but this year not requiring such assistance, he mentioned particularly the case of one. A woman who had previously called for assistance for hergetting along this winter, replied: "Thank the Lord, we have every thing nice and comfortable, now-rum is gone, and we have no need to ask for help."

"Rum is gone" — here was the secret poverty had fled with it, and peace and plenty taken its place. Sober industry now made home cheerful and happy, and the town was relieved of its former burden. And this case is by no means a solitary, one. Had money and work been as plenty this year as And all ammoniacal manures seem for three or four years past, the calls upon would have been very materially lessened .-But those have asked for relief this year, who never asked before; and on the other hand, many who have formerly asked, now have no necessity for doing so; the Maine Law has come in to their relief, the money previously spent for rum makes home cheerful and comfortable-a home of peace and plenty-a home that makes glad the hearts of wife and children-a home, indeed, to him who formerly cursed it with his pres-

LEWIS C. PENDLETON. Wellsborough, March 1, '55-tf.

For the Cure of COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRON-CHITIS, CROUP, ASTHMA, WHOOP-ING COUGH AND CONSUMPTION.

HIS remedy is offered to the community with the confidence we feel in an article which sel-lom fails to realize the happiest effects that can be desired. So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous the cares of its cures, that almost every section of the country abounds in persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use When once tried its superiority over every other medicine of its kind, is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmo nary organs, which are incident to our climate. Nothing has called louder for the earnest enquiry of medical men, than the alarming prevalence and fatality of consumptive complaints, nor has any one class of diseases had more of their investigations and care. But as yet no adequate remedy has been provided, on which the public could depend for pro tection from attacks upon the respiratory organs, un till the introduction of the CHERRY PECTORAL. This article is the product of a long, laborious, and I believe successful endcavor, to fornish the community with such a remedy. Of this last statement the American people are now themselves prepared to judge, and I appeal with confidence to their decision If there is any dependance to be placed in what men of every class and station certify it has done for them; if we can trust our own senses, when we see dangerous affections of the throat and lungs yield to it, if we can depend on the assurance of intelligent physicians, who make it theif business to know, short, if there is any reliance upon anything, then is it irrefutably proven that this medicine does relieve and does cure the class of diseases it is designed for, beyond any and all others that are know-to mankind. If this be true, it cannot be too freely published, nor be to widely known. The afflicted should know it. A remedy that cures, is priceless riceless to them. All should know it, for health can can be priced to no one. Not only should it be cirgeneral use in other nations as in this, it is employed by the more intelligent in almost all civilized countries. It is extensively employed in both Amer ica, in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the far off islands of the sea. Life is as dear to its possessors there as here, and they grasp at a valuable re medy with even more avidity. Unlike most preparations of its kind, it is an expensive composition of costly materials. Still it is afforded to the public at a reasonably low price, and what is of vastly mora importance to them, its quality is never suffered to decline from its original standard of excellence. Every bottle of this medicine, now manufactured, is as good as ever has been made heretofore, or as we are capable of making. No toil or cost is spared, in maintaining it in the best perfection which it is possible to produce. Hence the patient who procures the genuine CHERRY PECTORAL, can rely on having as good an article as ha who testify to its cures. od an article as has ever been had by those

By pursuing this course, I have the hope of doing some good in the world, as well as the satisfaction of believing that much has been done already.
