Do Women choose their Husbands? A very clever correspondent has sent us a letter containing query...

There is sound sense and truth in this; but is it not better that men should choose than that they should be chosen?

A wife's affection, on the contrary, always increases after marriage; and even if she were indifferent before, no well disposed woman can help loving the father of her children.

It is a strange, but melancholy fact, that when young girls fancy themselves in love, they are seldom if ever happy if they marry the object of their choice.

On the other hand the man who, with every pardonable vanity, fancied himself loved for his own merits, and who was perfectly unconscious of the secret delusions of the girl, becomes, when her friends and relations on both sides share in the same feelings...

The consequences are, indeed, in such cases generally sad enough. When the first delusion is dissipated, and the truth, in all its hard and stern reality, comes forth from the evil that has been thrown round it...

Three things that never become rusty—the money of the benevolent, the shoes of a butcher's horse, and a slanderous tongue.

Three things not easily done—to ally thine with fire, to dry wet with water, and to please all in everything that is done.

Three things as good as their betters—dirty water to extinguish a fire, a homely wife to a blind man, and a wooden sword to a coward.

Three things that are as good as the best—brown bread in a famine, well water in a thirst, and a great coat in very cold weather.

Three warnings from the grave—"Thou knowest what I was, thou knowest what I am, remember what thou art to be."

Three things in a peacock—the gab of an angel, the walk of a thief, and the voice of the devil.

One of the clergymen in Brooklyn has forbidden the members of his congregation to sing the popular song "Pop Goes the Weasel," because one verse ends thus: "The preacher kissed the cobbler's wife, Pop goes the weasel."

A Country of Contraries.

California, including that portion of Utah lying between the Sierra Nevada mountains and the desert on the east, is of all others, a country of contraries.

The whole earth for months together is either one continuous bed of flowers, a dry and arid waste, (except where forest trees abound) or drenched with soaking rains.

The extremes of morality and dissipation are seen every where, and Sunday is the great business and market day. Our women are either transcendently beautiful or homely as Diggers.

A witty correspondent sends us the following notice of a brief street colloquy recently held between a maiden lady of a little beyond a certain age, and a newly married feminine:

"So you are going to keep house, are you?" said the elderly maiden.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Going to have a girl, I suppose," was queried.

The newly made wife colored and then quietly responded that—"She really didn't know whether it would be a boy or a girl."
