The Chinese Sugar Cane.

The New Orleans Delta publishes the following extract from a letter from Thomas Affleck, Esq., of Mississippi, to a sugar planter, on seeking information relative to the newly introduced Sorgho Sucre :

"The 'Chinese Sugar Cane,' so called (Sorghum Saccharatum,) the 'Sorgho Sucre,' of the French, I do verily believe will prove to be all that is claimed for it. I have studied it closely, and watched the results of the various experiments made, from its first introduction to France to this time. That it may pussibly 'supplant our sugar cane,' I cannot pretend to say; yet such a result would not be at all surprising. Nor can I see why you should feel alarmed at the prospect; on the contrary, as you fear 'a decided short crop of cane,' not only on your own plantation, out generally in Louisiana, I should say sow all of the seed of this new plant that you can, tind time or land for; and test it thoroughly. If Providence has sent us a perfectly hardy annual, exceedingly rich in sugar, to take the place of the very uncertain 'cane,' by all means let us accept of the boon. You have Whe land, the hands trained to the work, the buildings and machinery sufficient for double the crop you are likely to make from the cane now in the ground,' why then not try this plan? You cannot lose much by it, as it yields a most valuable article of fodder, and may, and I think must gain very greatly by it in the results of your sugar crop. Even if it proves to be all that its admirers claim for it wherever the maize reaches its highest perfection, the sorghum will assuredly yield more sugar with you than further North, besides attaining a vastly larger growth. These facts, together with your supply of machinery perfectly adapted to the purpose, and your thorough knowledge of sugar making, must give your sugar-growers in Louisiana a vast advantage over the farmers of the West.— Many will there and elsewhere make their own supply of sugar, and perhaps something more, as they now do from the maple tree; but I doubt if it be largely carried on, as a ·business for many years if ever."

Mr. George Wilkins Kendall, of the Picagune, writes to his paper from his plantation near New Braunfels, Texas, as follows :

"For the last six months I have hardly opened a paper, whether devoted to agricul ture, politics, religion, sporting affairs, or what not, without seeing some notice of the Sorgho Sucre, or Chinese sugar cane; why have I not a perfect right to add my experi ence to the general stock of information in relation to the cultivation of this new grain, or plant, or whatever it may be termed ? To begin, then: In October, 1855, I purchased in Paris a small paper of the seed. I do not think there was more than two heaping tablespoonsful of it, or three at the outside. I brought it with me to New Orleans, and on arriving sent it here to be planted. When I reached this place, early in May last, it was just peering above the ground, two rows of it in a ten acre field, which had been devoted in the main to millet, oats, and a little Indian corn, and four short rows in our garden ; the latter planted last.

"About the Sth of July the two rows in the larger field had shot up, headed out, and ripened, not withstanding the drought, and heavy heads were cut for seed. The oats mean while had come up, the millet was hardly above the ground, while the Indian corn was parched and drying up for the want of rain. Two or three mornings afterwards, on looking at the field from a hill close by, I noticed that the two rows of Sorgho Sucre had entirely disappeared, while rows of Indian corn on either side were still standing. On close tion, I ascertained that a lot for dry weather. Of its properties for the production of sugar

I can say nothing ; I only know that it tastes like the common sugar cane, and is full of juice about the time the first heads ripen. As a green fodder it also beats everything which grows ; horses, sheep and hogs are certainly inordinately fond of it, and so full are the stalks of saccharine matter, that they must be both nutricious and fattening. I cannot say what kind of bread or cakes the seeds will afford, nor can I tell what kind of dry fodder the plant will make when cut green these experiments I have yet to try, and now that I have the seed I intend to do it on a grand scale. I shall plant it in rows or drills, shall sow it and shall cut it at different stages to try its qualities as a dry fodder. Let me repeat over and over again, that it stands a drought better than anything we have-does not seem to require rain after it is once up.

Conversation.

Guests should be neither loquacious nor si ent; because eloquence is for the forum, and ilence for the bedchamber .--- Varro. Talk all wit would be as disagreeably monotonous as a dinner all champagne. When a man is always witty, it is a proof that he has no other quality equally conspicuous, and the person who is spoken of as par excellence "a wit," is a second rate conversationalist .-"He was so well dressed," said somebody to Brummell, "that people would turn and look at him," Then he was not well dressed,' replied the great master of the art. We venture to apply the doctrine to table talk. It should not want wit; but it should not exceed in it; the epigram should be sprinkled over it with the natural grace of daises on a meadow.-Anon.

There are persons who speak a momen efore they have thought; there are others with whom you have to undergo in conversation all the labor of their minds-they talk correctly and wearisomely .- La Bruyere.

The art of conversation consists much les in your own abundance than in enabling others to find talk for themselves. Men do not wish to admire you; they want to please .--Ibid.

The honorablest part of talk is to give the occasion .- Bacon.

It would appear that a thoroughly good talker, something is required of the talents of active life. Lord Bacon, Selden, Cicero and Burke, were all men of action. Napoleon said things which tell in history like his batthes. Luther's table-talk glows with the fire which burnt the Pope's bull. Nearly all great orators have been excellent in colloquy. and which is a kindred fact-a very large proportion of actors likewise. The best say ers of good things have been among states men, diplomatists, and men of the world .-We think the essence of the quality lies as much in the character as in the intellect .-It is an affair of the emotions, of the anima spirits. as well as of mental gifts .- Anon.

When we reflect that these Safes were located in the fourth story of the brilding we occupied, and that they fell subso-quently into a heap of burning ruins, where the vast concen-tration of heat caused the brans plates to melt, we cannot but regard the preservation of the valuable contents as most con-vincing proof of the great security afforded by your Bafes. -hogs are apt to do such things-had broken into the field, and devoured the Chinese super cane root and branch : it was cut clean to the ground by the porkers, not a sign or vestige was left, while, as already stated, the stalks of Indian corn on either side were left

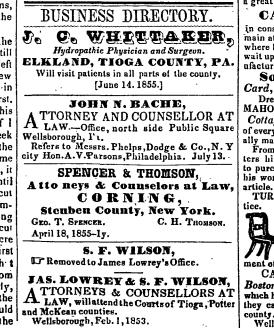

"Some few days after this-perhaps a fortnight-the rows planted in the garden were examined, the heads of seeds found to be ripe, and the greater portion cut and brought to the house, leaving the stalks still standing .--On cutting down one of the latter, which must have been ten feet high, I found it to be exceedingly heavy, and on tasting the cane it seemed to me to be as full of saccharine juice as the ordinary sugar cane of Louisi-Tuna. At the same time I had two or three imported French merino sheep in my yard, in great want of green fodder, and on cutting the cane into small pieces I found that they devoured it with the greatest avidity. After this I fed them daily on it for some time, a single stalk furnishing a good bait. I also gave some of it to a favorite mare, she eating

t even more greedily than the sheep. Some three weeks after the ripe heads of the seed were cut I noticed that new heads had shot up from the same stalk ; and these new heads blossomed, filled and ripened in September, and were cut out and brought to the house. All this time you must recollect we were suffering from the unprecedented drouth, and Indian corn and sweet potatoes, water melons, pumpkins, and the like, had died down to the very ground.

"I now became more interested in the Sorgho Sucre than ever, and although I still fed out daily to the merinoes and mare, left a portion of the stalks standing. Some new heads were seen shooting out, and these in turn blossomed and ripened as did the first. I kept no account of dates, but think this third crop of seed from the same stalk, if 1 may call it, was gathered about the first week of October; it might have been during the second week of that month. I planted some of this last seed by way of experiment, it came up rapidly, looking thrifty, grew until it was nearly knee-high, and was finally cut down by frost in November. A great number of shoots or suckers, which had sprung up from the stalks first planted, were cut down at the same time; the Sorgho Sucre can stand any kind of drought, but the first sharp frost kills it to the ground. And what amount of seed do you think I gathered from the little paper I purchased in Paris ? Nearly, if not quite, two bushels! and had not the hogs broken into the field, I believe I should and McKean counties. have had three. It certainly yields in the
