The most bigoted and upreasonable party man we ever met with was Jack. D., now a prosperous and influential attorney in Scounty in this State.

At the time of which we are writing he was a red hot Democrat, and his chief pleasure seemed to consist in making the lact as notorious as possible to the whole world. His friends and acquaintances who knew him well, and whom he had often victimized, with one consent, pronounced Jack a bore and his politics a nuisance; but with a stranger the thing was essentially different. Seized by the button at the moment of introduction. Jack would astonish him by a rapid rehearsal of the articles of his political creed-and branch out into an interminable thansody on the manifest destiny of the great Democratic party,

One unlucky day Jack met at the house of great; per a mutual friend, a young lady of great personal beauty and accomplishment; attracted by her loveliness, by her intelligence, he became assiduous in his attentions, forgot for a while his "principles," and without inquiring what might be the political preference of his lady love, imprudently proposed, was accepted, and they were married.

The wedding was over, the guests had departed; the happy pair had retired to their chamber, and were snugly ensconced in bed, when Jack in the course of a quiet conversafavorite subject by casually speaking of himself as a Democrat.

"What!" said she, turning sharply and suddenly upon him, "are you a Democrat?" "Yes, madam," replied Jack, delighted with the idea of having a patient listener to his long restrained oratory. "I am a Democrat, a real Jeffersonian Democrat, attached to the principles of the great Democratic party; a regular out and outer, doubled, dyed and twisted in the wool," "Just double and twist yourself out of this bed, then," interrupted his wife. I am a Republican and I never will sleep with any man professing the abominable doctrines you do.' Jack was speechless from absolute astonishment. That the very wife of his bosom should persussion-'twas no go. She was in soher a prompt renunciation of his heresy, or a bed

To give up the great and established doctrines of his party, to renounce his allegiance to that faith which had become identified with his very being, to be ruled by the mere whim and caprice of a woman, was utterly ridiculous and absurd, and he threw himself from the bed, and prepared to quit the room.

As he was leaving the door she called to him, "I say, my dear, when you repent your tell me not that absence conquers love past error, just knock at my door, and per- the longer you stay away, the better I like haps I will let you in."

The door was violently slammed to, and Jack proceeded in quest of another apartment. A sense of insulted dignity, and a firm conviction that he was a martyr in the right cause, strengthened his pride, and he resolved to hold out till he forced his wife into a capitulation.

In the morning she met him as if nothing had happened, but whenever Jack ventured to allude to the runture of the night previous, there was a laughing devil in her eye that bespoke a consciousness of power, and extinguished hope.

A second night he repaired to his lonely couch, and a second day was the repetition of the first-no allusion was made to the forbidden subject on either side. There was a look of quiet happiness and cheerfulness about his wife that puzzled Jack sorely, and he felt that all idea of forcing her into a sur-city Hon.A.V.Parsons,Philadelphia. July 13. about his wife that puzzled Jack sorely, and render must be abandoned.

A third night he was alone with his thot's. His reflections were more serious and composed than on the night previous. What they were was of course only known to himself. but they seemed to result in something decided for about midnight three distinct raps were made at his wife's door. No answer. The signal was repeated in a louder tone, still all was silent, and the third time the door shook with the violent attack from the out-

"Who's there?" cried his wife just aroused from a deep sleep.

"It's me my dear, and perhaps a little the best Republican you ever saw."

The revolution in his opinion was radical and permanent. He removed to another county, became popular, offered himself as a candidate on the Republican ticket for the Legislature, and was elected, and for several sessions represented his adopted county as a firm and decided Republican, although not so noisy and disputatious as before.

John Phoenix in the Ladies' Car.

It may not be generally known that "John" Phœnix has been a passenger on the Central Railroad, but such is the fact. He tells an incident connected with his ride, in a letter to the Knickerbocker Magazine, which he puts on record to serve as a caution to future innocent travelers. He says :- "I had observed at each change of cars, and they were frequent, when the general scramble took place, one car was defended from the assault by a stalwart man, usually of Irish persuasion, who deaf to menaces, unsoftened by entreaty and uncorrupted by bribes, maintained his position for the benefit of the "leddies."-"Leddies' car, Sir, av ye plase; forrid car for gintlemen without "leddies." Need I say that this car so reserved was by far the W. W. ROBINSON most comfortable of the train, and that with that stern resolve which ever distinguishes me in the discharge of my duty toward myself I determined to get into it coute out coute.

Books, Stationery, Blank Books, Wall Paper—English, French and American Maaufacture, Toilet utensits and Perfumery, Fanself, I determined to get into it coute qui coute. So when we changed cars at Utica, I rushed forth; and seeing a nice young person, with a pretty face, bonnet and shawl, and a large portmanteau, urging her way through the crowd, I stepped up by her side, and with my native grace and gallantry, offered my arm and my assistance, They were gratefully accepted, and proud of my success, I ushered my fair charge up to the platform of the ladies' car. My old enemy was holding the door. "Is that your lady, sir?" said he:

admission, Lateplied 2 Yes 12 Judge 20 my horror when this low employee of a monopo lizing and pnaccommodating Railroad Company, addressing my companion with the tone and manner of an old acquaintance. said-"Well, Sal, I guess you've done well, but I dont believe his family will think much of the match." However, I got into the ladies' car, and having repudiated the young person, Sally, got an exceedingly pleasant seat by the side of a very warm and comfortable young lady of a sleepy turn and quiet disposition. I wouldn't have exchanged her for two buffalo robes, but alas! she got off at Syracuse, and then, frosty Caucasus, how cold it was !- And so grinding and joling. jarring, sliding and freezing; wore away the long night.

In the morning we were at Buffalo. I saw nothing of it but a railroad depot; but I remember thinking as I stamped my feet and thrashed my arms to restore the circulation. that if that sort of weather continued, "the Buffalo girls couldn't come out to night," and would probably have to postpone their appearance until the summer season."

At a Baptism in the Western part of the State, a few weeks since, a girl of a shy disposition about to be immersed very naturally resisted the attempts of the minister to lead her into the water, and after a short struggle began to cry and sob, with great violence.-At this moment, while a crowd of spectators tion with his wife, unwittingly alluded to his were anxiously watching the result, a younger brother of the girl stepped up to her and exclaimed, in an under tone-"Don't be scared, Sal, they're only in fun."

THE SABBATH.—It is very remarkable that the heathen nations who can be supposed to have no knowledge of the law or history of Moses, account one day of the seven more sacred than the rest. Hesiod styles the seventh day, "the illustrious of the sun: and Homer says: "Then came the sevent day which is sacred or holy." Almost all nations who have any notion of religion have appropriated one day in seven to the purpose of public devotion.

I distrust both the intellect and the morality of those people to whom disorder is no consequence--who can live at ease in an Augean prove a traitor was horrible-she must be stable. What surrounds us reflects more or jesting. He remonstrated-in vain-tried less that which is within us. The mind is like one of those dark lanterns which, in earnest, and the only alternative lest him was spite of everything, still throws some light around. If our tastes did not reveal our in another room; Jack did not take long to character, they would be no longer tastes, but

HERRING'S SAFE

The only Safe which, in every instance, preserved their churcontents in the late Extensive Fire.

A T the burning of the Artizan Buildings, April 10th, and in the great fire in Market Street, May 1st.
1856, the genuine HERRING SAFE preserved the Jewelry of Goi, W. Simons & Bro.; Books, Papers.&c. of Fisher & Bro., and Enward Seannan & Co., after remaining exposed in the burning rains for nearly FORTY HOURS, and proving conclusively what we have always claimed for them, their great superiority over all securities now known.
In these fires, the HERRING'S SAFE, standing side by sale with those advertised as "farranted to stand 10 per centmore fire than Herring's came from the answeletzed victor, mot only preserving their contents the answeletzed victor, more fire than Herring's came from the answeletzed victor, mot fire than the ring's came from the answeletzed victor, mot only preserving their contents to see their work being themselves in a condition to go through another ordea, while the boasted "Salamanders" of other makers were bed by used up in every instance, and in some cases their entire contents completely destroyed.

To the public we would simply say, that, during the fourteen years the Herring's safe has been before them, more than two hundred have passed through secidental fires without the occurrence of a single loss?

We would therefore, caution purchasers against the marepresentation of interested parties. The Herring's Paten;
