and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American Strutes, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the threat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Purents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steads up at them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to behave the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives by the consumptions it presents than those it cares. Keep it by you and cure your colds while they are cumble, now neglect them multipolarity in the part of the production of the production of the freak of the part of the disable, out your life away. All know the dreadful fatalty of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this roundy, we need not do more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spars no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford hose who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.
