Health and long life are almost universally associated with early rising: and we are pointed to countless old people, as avidence of its good effects on the general system. Can any of our readers, on the spur of the moment, give a good and conclusive reason why health should be attributed to this habit We know that old people get up early; but it maimply because they can't sleep. Moderais aid age does not require much sleep; hence, in the aged, early rising is a necessity. or a convenience, and is not a cause of health in itself. There is a large class of early risers, who may be truly said not to have a day's health in a year-the thirsty folk, for example, who drink liquor until midnight. and rise early to get more! One of our earliest recollections is, that of "old soakers' making their "devious way" to the grogshop or the lavern bar-room, before sun-rise for their morning grog. Early rising, to be beneficial, must have two concomitants; to retire early, and on rising, to be properly employed. One of the most eminent divines in this country rose by daylight for many years, and at the end of that time became an invalid—has traveled the world over for health, and has never regained it, nor ever will. It is rather an early retiring that does the good, by keeping people out of those mischievous practices which darkness favors, and which need not here be more particularly referred to.

Another important advantage of retiring early is, that the intense stillness of midnight and the early morning hours favor that unbroken repose which is the all-powerful rengyator of the tired system. Without, then, the accompaniment of retiring early, "early rising" is worse than useless, and is posi tively mischievous. Every person should be allowed to "have his sleep out," otherwise the duties of the day cannot be properly performed, will be necessarily slighted, even by the most conscientious.

To all young persons, to students, to the medentary, and to invalids, the fullest sleep that the system will take, without artificial means, is the balm of life-without it there can be no restoration to health and activity again. Never wake up the sick or infirm or young children of a morning-it is barbarity; let them wake of themselves; let the care rather be to establish an hour for retiring, so early that their fullest sleep may be out before sunrise. Another item of very great importance is

Do not hurry up the young and the weakly. It is no advantage to pull them out of bed as soon as their eyes are open, nor is it best for the studious, or even for the well, who have passed an unusually fatiguing day, to jump out of bed the moment they wake up; le them remain, without going to sleep again, until the sense of weariness passes from the limbs. Nature abhors two things; violence and a vacuum. The sun does not break out at once into the glare of the meridian. The diurnal flowers unfold themselves by slow degrees; nor the fleetest beast, nor sprightliest bird, leaps at once from its resting-place. By all of which we mean to say, that as no physiological truth is more demonstrable, than that the brain, and with it the whole nervous system, is recuperated by sleep, it is of the first importance, as to the well-being of the human system, that it have its fullest measure of it; and to that end the habit of retiring early should be made imperative on all children, and no ordinary event should be allowed to interfere with it. Its moral healthfulness is not less important than its physical. Many a young man, many a young woman, has made the first step towards degredation, and crime, and disease, after ten o'clock at night; at which hour, the year round, the old, the middle aged, and the young, should be in bed; and then the early rising will take care of itself, with the incalculable accompaniment of a full-rested body and a renovated brain. We repeat it, there is neither wis-dom, nor safety, nor health, in early rising itself: but there is all of them in the persistent practice of retiring to bed at an early hour, winter and summer .- Hall's Journal of Health.

THE TRUE DOCTRINE .- Our praying, singing, and Bible reading will not help us heavenward, unless we are just between man and man. The Christian professor is nothing without the Christian life. Our religion, in order to change us radically, must descend into all commonest duties. It belongs as much to the shop as to the family, and as much to the family as to the sanctuary .-"No man can be a Christian who is no: faithful in his common daily pursuit. The Judge must administer justice from equity, and not from favor or the lure of bribes .-The physician must regard the life and health of his patient above all other considerations. The merchant must deal justly, and the mechanic execute his work in all things faithfully. It will not answer to disregard these things. My brother, do not hope to reach heaven by the old way. You must walk in another, and narrower road .--Let us suppose you are a workman. Now what is a Christian in a workshop? You cannot leave it behind you, go where you will; for it is no loosely fitting garment, but an element of life. Yes, you must take it with you into the workshop. Not as the Bible in your hand, nor as hymns to make the air melodious; nor as pious talk with fellow workmen. No, no, workshop Christianity consists in a religious fidelity to your employer and his customers. If you neglect or slight the work you are paid to perform, you commit sin; you are irreligious and your pious acts will go for nothing.

A celebrated writer says :- "No woman can be a lady who can wound or mortify another. No matter how beautiful, how refined. how cultivated she may be, she is, in reality coarse, and the innate vulgarity of her na ture manifests itself here. Uniformily kind, courteous and nolite treatment of all persons, is one mark of a true woman."

CHRISTIAN PERFECTION .-- If an angel were sent to find the perfect man, he would probably not find him composing a body of divinity, but perhaps a cripple in a poor house whom the parish wish dead, and who is humbled before God with far lower thoughts of himself than others think of him.

The Peoria (Illinois) Transcript remarks that among the peculiar incidents connected with the present season, is the fact that the bees have not increased. No hive in that section has swarmed. This is attributed to the wet weather, which has deprived them of their usual pasturage, and in many places they merely sustained life by having access to cultivated flowers. Large numbers are supposed to have died through actual starvation. Blossoms on the low grounds have been almost entirely destroyed; those on the trees were washed off by the rains, or blasted, while in only a very few instances has the wild or cultivated rose come to perfection. Under these circumstances, the yield of honey is likely to be very small.

BUCHU LEAVES are procured from the south-ern part of Africa. The Hottentots at the cape of Good Hope have long used this article as a remedy in a variety of diseases. From them the medicine was borrowed by the English and Dutch physicians residing there and by their recommend-ation it was soon employed in Europe. In process of time this medicine has come into general use, and is highly spoken of by the best medical writers. Physicians recommend it mostly for complaints of the urinary organs, such as gravel, a morbid irrita-tion of the bladder and urethra, retention of urine, also incontinence of urine from want of tone in the urinary organs. It cools the unnatural heat and relieves pain; and in many cases of long standing it has been effectual when other valuable medicines had failed to produce an effect. The active principle of this medicine is a volatile oil which is mostly lost by the old process of boiling. Hence it requires concentrated preparation prepared by the new process called 'Displacement." By this the valuable properties of the Buchu are entirely preserved, and this form of the medicine is less liable to injury from age and more palateable. Useful equally in all cases of the kind whether male or female. Price 75 cents per bottle. For sale at Roy's Drug and Chemical Store at Wellsboro Pa.
