THE TIOGA COUNTY AGITATOR.

Deacon John Bolles,

The following is a good illustration of sectarian bigotry, as well as characteristic inci-dent in the life of Deacon Bolls, who was an eminent type of the age in which he lived. for personal and private worth, both as a man and a christian :

When the Baptists of Hartford began to hold public services, an over zealous member of Dr. Strong's society called upon him and asked him if he knew that John Bolles had started an opposition meeting.

"No," said he, "when-where ?"

"Why at the old court house."

"O, yes, I know it," the doctor carelessly replied ; "but it is not an opposition meeting. They are Baptists, to be sure, but they preach the same doctrine that I do. You had better go and hear them."

"Go," said the man, "I am a Presbyterian."

"So am I," rejoined Dr. Strong, "but that need not prevent us from wishing them well.

You had better go." "No," said the man with energy, "I shan't go near them. Dr. Strong, aint you going to do something about it ?" "What ?"

"S op it, can't you ?"

"My friend," said the doctor, seriously, "John Bolles is a good man, and will surely go to heaven. If you and I get there, we shall meet him, and we had better, therefore, cultivate a pleasant acquaiutance with him here."

Sixty years ago, when the toleration of the denomination to which Descon B. belonged, was of a limited character, the pertinence of the above anecdote will be better understood. No layman in New England ever exalted a wider influence for good, or held a higher position in behalf of the rights of conscience. His home was ever known as the house of the "Master's brethren," where his benevolent hospitality entertained the oppressed and weary pilgrims of religious persecutions.

MUSIC AND FLOWERS .- Two gifts God has bestowed on us that have in Themselves no guilty trait, and show an essential divineness. Music is one of them, which seems as though it were never born of earth, but lingers with us from the gates of heaven .- Music, which breathes over the gross, or sad, or doubting heart, to inspire it with a consciousness of its most mysterious affinities, and to touch the cords of its undevoted, unsuspected life. And the other gift is that of flowers, which, though born of earth, we may well believe, if anything of earthly soil grows in the higher realm-if any of its methods are continued-if any of its forms are identical there, will live on the banks of the river of Life. Flowers, that in all our gladness, in all our sorrow, are never incongruous---always appropriate. Appropriate in the Church, as expressive of its purest of most social themes, and blending their sweetness with the incense of prayer. Appropriate in the joy of the marriage hour, in the loneliness of the sick room, and crowning with prophecy the foreheads of the dead. They give completeness to the associations of child. hood, and are appropriate even by the side of old age, strange as their freshness contrasts with the wrinkles and the grey hairs; for still they are symbolical of the soul's perpetual youth, the inward blossoming of immortality, the amaranthing crown. In their presence we feel that when the body shall drop as a withered calyx, the soul shall go forth as a winged seed.-[Rev. F. H. Chapin.

MAHOMET .--- Slightly above the middle size, his figure though spare, was handsome and commanding, the chest broad ond open, the bones and framework large, the joints well knit together. His neck was long and finely The head--unusually largemoulded. gave space for a broad and noble brow. The hair, thick, jet black and slightly curling, fell down over his ears. The eye-brows were arched and joined; the countenance thin, but ruddy. His large eyes, intensely black and piercing, received additional lustre from their long, dark eyelashes. The nose was high and slightly aquiline, but fine, and at the end attenuated. The teeth were far apart. A long, black, bushy beard, reaching to the breast, added manliness and presence. His expression was pensive and contemplative .--The face beamed with intelligence, though something of the sensuous might also be there discerned. His broad back leaned slightly forward as he walked; and his step was hasty, yet sharp and decided, like that of one rapidly descending a declivity. There was something unsettled in his bloodshot eye, which refused to rest upon its object. When he turned towards you, it was never partially but with the whole body .-- [Muir's Life of Mahomet.

AFTER ELECTION MUSINGS .- The Albany Times gives the following rather natural mu sings of an individual in that city, over the aspect of things before election and after. "'Election's over, and Jonathan Nicholson ain't no 'count any longer,' A fortnight age, and he was as great a man as anybody,-His vote was just as good and counted as much as the Mayor's or the Governor's. Nicholson was a man of consequence then They had him around at the Ward meetings, they put him on committees, they told him he was a man of great influence, they invited him to Weldon's, and other places, to 'take something,' they patted him on the shoulder, and told him to go ahead and help save the country, and they would do some-thing handsome by him. Nicholson has done as he agreed. He worked night and day for the ticket. Now that 'lection's over, Jona' than Nicholson ain't no where. These politicians repudiate him. They do not even look at him in the street. They pass him by as if he was a common loafer. From this day Nicholson passes upon all politicians. they are hypocrites. Nicholson, you have been scandalously sold."

A QUESTION AT LAW .--- A Keniucky lawver on circuit was asked to dine with the Judge. At the table, the Judge, as is his custom, asked a blessing, and shortly after arose from his seat and took from the sideboard a bottle of old Bourbon, of which he invited his guests to partake, partaking freely himself, as is also his custom. After dinner, the lawyer said : "Judge, will you permit me to ask you a question ?" "Oh, certainly," replied the Judge, "what

"I observed," said the lawyer, "that after you had asked a blessing you set on the botle. Now I wish to know whether you are ashamed to ask a blessing on the liquor,, or whether you thought it was good enough without ?

The unfortunate man we regret to learn, is now lying in an utterly hopeless condition, being unable to move hands or lcgs, or to perform any of his natural functions—in a word, he is a living head, but a dead body. He has lain in this state since the occurrence of the accident, and the probability is, that he will names remain the use of his limbs. The met with an accident which caused the dislowill never regain the use of his limbs. The poor man is attended by Dr. McIntosh, who, we learn, entertains no hope of his recovery. -- Hamilton, C. W. STATE'S EVIDENCE .- A good story is told of George White, a notorious thief, in Worcester county, Mass. He was once arraigned for horse stealing, when it was supposed he was connected with an extensive gang, which was laying contributions upon all the stables round about. Many inducements were held out to White to reveal the names of his associates, but he maintained a dogged silence. An assurance from the court was at last obtained that he should be discharged, upon which he made oath to reveal all he knew of his accomplices. The jury were accordingly suffered to bring in a verdict of "not guilty," when he was called upon for the promised revelations. "I shall be faithful to my word," said he ; "understand then that the devil is the only accomplice I ever had-we have been a great while in partnership-you have acquitted me, and you may hang him if you catch him."

A gentleman named Fanshaw, residing in Saratoga county, New York, offered to allow one Sanderson to burn down his cow house if Judge Parker failed to get 5,000 majoriety for Governor. Mr. Sanderson won the priv-ilege of touching off the cow house and the cow house was burnt to the ground. In burning the cow house, Mr. Sanderson also burnt two cows, worth $90. Mr. Fanshaw admits that his friend had a perfect right to burn the house, but not the cattle. For doing this latter, Fanshaw has commenced suit against Sanderson.
