

A T S E A. The night is made for cooling shade, For silence, and for sleep; And when I was a child, I laid My hands upon my breast, and prayed, And sank to slumber deep; Childlike as then, I lie to-night, And watch my lonely cabin light.

Each movement of the swaying lamp Shows how the vessel reels; As o'er her deck the billows tramp And all her timbers strain and creak With every shock she feels, It starts and shudders, while it burns, And in its hinged socket turns.

Now swinging slow, and slanting low, It almost level lies; And yet I know, while to and fro I watch the seeming pendule go With restless fall and rise, The steady shaft is still upright, Poising its little globe of light.

O hand of God! O lamp of peace! O promise of my soul! Though weak, and tossed, and ill at ease, Amid the roar of smiting seas, The ship's convulsive roll, I own, with love and tender awe, You perfect type of faith and law!

A heavenly trust my spirit calms, My soul is filled with light; The ocean sings his solemn psalms, The wild winds chant: 'I cross my palms, I happy as if to-night, Under the cottage-roof, again I heard the soothing summer-rain.' (Atlantic Monthly for January.)

History of the Amistad Case. Mr. Giddings writes from Washington to the Ashtabula Sentinel, giving an interesting Congressional history of the famous "Amistad" case. He says: On the third day of the session, Senator Mason obtained a vote for making the bill to pay for the Amistad slaves, a special order for the next Tuesday; but has suffered it to lie over until near the close of the fourth week. I fear it will not come up at this session. It has always passed the Senate without discussion, but several senators have looked into it, and are now prepared to speak upon it.

It is an interesting case. It came up in the House of Representatives in 1844 for the first time on a motion to print extra copies of the report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in favor of the claim. It was my fortune to lead the debate in opposition to the motion. Mr. Adams designed to speak on the same side, after the Chairman, Mr. Ingersoll should have replied to me. The morning hour only was allotted to the subject. I occupied the first morning, and when I concluded Mr. Ingersoll obtained the floor, and I well recollect that some excellent friends were alarmed at the boldness with which I had attacked the report, saying that Ingersoll was one of the ablest members of the House, and would aliterate me whenever he should speak. But I had become somewhat accustomed to such oblations, and said to them I had the most perfect confidence that Mr. Adams would furnish as much cause for Ingersoll to fear, as Ingersoll did for me to entertain apprehension. Mr. Adams felt a deep interest in the subject, and prepared for a severe examination of it.

But when the next morning came, Ingersoll saw the intention of Mr. Adams, and qualified before it. He backed down and actually receded to lay his own motion on the table. I escaped the castigation which my friends so much feared, because Ingersoll dreaded the rod which Mr. Adams had prepared for him. But the old patriot was disappointed. He desired to give an exposé of the case and after his return at the close of the session, he republished the speech he had intended to make for the benefit of his constituents; and now after the labor of nearly fifteen years, members of Congress have looked up that speech, in order to prepare for the discussion, which, I fear, will not take place.

Four years after this transaction, the Senate amended our civil and diplomatic appropriation bill, by inserting fifty thousand dollars to pay for those slaves. Mr. Adams had been prostrated by a paralytic shock. He was so conscious of its effects that he would neither speak nor write for the public eye. His friends had greatly desired a letter from him addressed to the public, or to some friend as a farewell memento; but he refused. His son, Hon. C. F. Adams came with him to Washington. His entrance in the Hall, after the members had so long regarded him as dead, was a most interesting scene. Southern Slaveholders who had bitterly opposed him in former times, now wept at again seeing him. All business was suspended as he entered the Hall. He was feeble and pale—Holmes of South Carolina, taking him by the arm conducted him to his seat, and then addressed a few words to the House, congratulating the members on once more seeing their venerable associate in his seat. The veteran Statesman responded in a few words, but his voice was too feeble to be heard, except by those nearest to him. He continued to meet with us, but made no attempt to participate in any discussion, until the amendment of the Senate providing for the payment of these slaves came up for discussion.

On that subject his feelings would not permit him to remain silent. When he was announced as having the floor, the House was instantly in the most perfect confusion. Members in all parts of the Hall left their seats and gathered as near as possible, to catch the last words of the illustrious Statesman. All seemed conscious that it would be his last speech. The reporters, unable to hear him in their places, and unmindful of the rules, rushed within the bar, paper and pencil in hand, to sketch his last public address.

That speech was devoted to an exposure of the insulting claim approved and recommended by Polk and Pierce, and twice by Buchanan, and now pressed upon the Senate. It was, truly the last speech of my venerated friend. A few days afterwards we bore his unconscious body from the hall. He fell in the place from which he had spoken. He died, as it were opposing this claim.

ALL WEATHER GOOD.—The following happy allusion to the weather, was made by Edward Everett, in his recent speech at Binghamton: To speak seriously, I should be ashamed of myself if it required any premeditation, any forethought, to pour out the simple and honest effusions of the heart on an occasion so interesting as this. A good occasion, sir; a good day, sir, notwithstanding its commencement.—I have heard from one friend and another this morning—kind enough to pay his respects to me, knowing on what errand I had come—I have heard from one and another the remark that he was sorry that we hadn't a good day. It was, it is true, raining in the morning.—But it is a good day, notwithstanding the rain. The weather is good; all weather is good; sunshine is good; rain is good. Not good weather, sir? Ask the farmer into whose grains and roots there yet remains some moisture, to be driven out by to-morrow's sun.—Ask the boatman, who is waiting for his raft to go over the rapids. Ask the dairyman and grazer if the rain, even at this season, is not good. Ask the lover of nature if it is not good weather when it rains. Sir, one may see in Europe artificial water works, cascades constructed by the skill of man at enormous expense—at Chatsworth, at Hesse Cassel, and the remains of magnificent water works at Marly, where Louis XIV. lavished uncounted millions of gold, and thus, according to some writers, laid the foundation of those depletions of the treasury which brought on the French Revolution. The traveler thinks it a good thing to see the artificial water works, where a little water is pumped up by creaking machinery, or a panting steam engine, to be scattered in frothy spray; and do we talk of its not being a good day when God's great engine is exhibited to us, His imperial works sending up the mists and vapors to the clouds, to be rained down again in comfort, and beauty, and plenty, upon grateful and thirsty man? Sir, as a mere gratification of the taste, I know nothing in nature more sublime, more beautiful than these, descending in abundance and sublimity from the skies.

At five years of age the father begins to rub the mother out of his child; at ten the schoolmaster rubs out the father; at twenty the college rubs out the schoolmaster; at twenty-five the world rubs out all its predecessors, and gives us a new education, till we are old enough and wise enough to take reason and religion for our pastor, when we employ the rest of our lives in unlearning what we had previously learned.

BUCHU LEAVES are procured from the southern part of Africa. The Hottentots at the Cape of Good Hope have long used this article as a remedy in a variety of diseases. From them the medicine was borrowed by the English and Dutch physicians residing there and by their recommendation it was soon employed in Europe. In process of time this medicine has come into general use, and is highly spoken of by the best medical writers. Physicians recommend it mostly for complaints of the urinary organs, such as gravel, a morbid irritation of the bladder and urethra, retention of urine, and incontinence of urine from want of tone in the urinary organs. It cures the unnatural heat and relieves pain, and in many cases of long standing it has been effectual when other valuable medicines had failed to produce effect. The active principle of this medicine is a volatile oil which is mostly lost by the old process of boiling. Hence it requires great care and skillful management to prepare this medicine properly.

FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU is a strong or concentrated preparation prepared by the new process called "Displacement." By this the valuable properties of the Buchu are entirely preserved, and this form of the medicine is less liable to injury from age and more palatable. Useful equally in all cases of the kind whether male or female. Price 75 cents per bottle. For sale at Roy's Drug and Chemical Store at Wellsboro Pa.

ROSEMARY OINTMENT is a useful article for chapped hands, pimples on the face, burns, scalds, eruptions on the skin &c. Price 12 1/2 and 25 cents per box.

MAYER'S OINTMENT.—This ointment has long been held to be a great secret among the Germans. It is highly valued as a successful cure for fever sores, bad ulcers and sores of almost every kind which are found to be difficult to heal. See directions on the box.

HEADACHE PILLS.—For sick headache, neuralgia, headache and all headache that comes on at regular intervals.

BOOKS. A variety of Children's Books—Blank Books—School Books, Stationery &c. Also the Depository of the Tioga County Bible Society—containing a large variety of Bibles and Testaments from 64 cents to $6.00.

TO THE LADIES! A New Kind of Soap has recently been invented, which promises to supersede all other kinds of hard soap. It is used extensively for washing clothes, and possesses the remarkable property of extracting dirt without boiling the clothes and without the use of the rubbing board. The process of washing requires less than half the time, and only about half the labor, by using this Patent Soap. This article is peculiarly excellent, and superior to any thing else called Soap; because while it saves time and labor, it never ruins or injures the clothes. It is just the article it is represented to be, and never disappointing the expectations of purchasers. It does not take out stains. For sale at Roy's Drug Store, Wellsboro, Pa.
