The Town Tattler. BY HETTY HEARTLY.

There is, strange to say, one class of people in this our enlightened age, who are opposed to the publication and circulation of newspapers and all printed information, upon principle .-They see in the new disseminator of knowledge a medium superior to their own, and like Othello, feeling that their occupation is gone, they are loud in their denunciation of the innovation. Need we state that this band is composed of those whose very life and meat is to tat | so here, by extending our view over many cen tle and make mischief?

Who that has lived in a small country town, influence, or been acquainted with one of these pests, who, assuming a warm interest in the affairs of others, manifest a kindness that worms itself in, to the victim's confidence, only to betray it at last? Is there a habitable place in our vast country, in which the gossip has not found a resting place? That is plainly a misnomer, for the tattler never rests. She (for we must confess that the busy body is generally one of our own sex) never tires in the work that she has given herself to do. She will find some subject for remark, and if no cause exists, she will create one. She is gifted with a most prolific imagination, and draws upon it ad libitum, either for the delectation of herself or her friends, who are accustomed to look to her for news. Many a life has she blasted, with the ungenerous and unfounded suspicions which she has given rise to. Many n heart, in the fullness of its joy, has had its dreamer has seen its almost verified hopes scattered before her pestilential breath.—From the ever shut out the rays of hope, dooming them to a life-long despair.

See her now, sitting at her window overlooking the street through which business or inclination calls her neighbors. Had the vulture a human prototype, this would be her, as she sits picking character to pieces, and fixing the sharp claws of slander in the very vitals of reputation. Thus she discourses.

There's that Miss Trippet! She's always gadding about, and minding other people's business when she ought to be at home, helping her mother. Now that poor woman is daughter promenades the street, dressed up in the highest style of fashion. I don't know that keeps the store, don't have so much to say for nothing. She takes good care to pass his store every time she goes out. Now I wouldn't do a thing to operate against any one, or hurt their feelings, but I am determined to find out all about them two. I feel perfectly satisfied that there is something wrong going on between them. Still I don't want to act upon mere suspicion so I'll just set Jane to watch. Then there's her brother. He pretends to be a partner in a store in York, and comes up here, dressed up in his finery, to dazzle us country people. It's my opinion that he gambles.-He has lots of money, for I saw him pay the stage driver from a lot of bills; fives and tens, the driver said when I asked him. Now I don't believe that any young man could earn that amount honestly, and I shan't rest till I know the truth of it. Her mother too! How do I know that she was ever married? I havn't got any proof of it! She came into the village unknown to anybody. She says that she's a widow! Yes, a grass widow. Now I'll venture to assert that she is a vixen, and has driven the man to California, or suicide. I'll know all these things as sure as I live.

There goes the new minister. He's the most stuck-up parson that I ever knew. He may be good and pious, but I'd like to see some evidence of it. I don't like his attentions to Miss Pray. There can't any good come of it .-These ministers will always bear watching .-I offered to assist him in visiting the poor, but he told me that he didn't need my assistance, yet Miss Pray and him often meet at sick beds, and at the houses of the poor neighbors. A strange place to carry on amours. I'm de-termined that our church shall be purified, at all events. I wouldn't distress any one, but I'll have the whole thing exposed.

'Oh! yes, doctor, you can ride in your gig to be sure, but I know it ain't paid for. I'd just like to know what kind of medicine he's giving to Mrs. Forceps. There's something wrong there, too. She's a hearty, healthy woman, and yet, she's been confined to her house two weeks, and he calls every day. I believe that her poor husband don't know all that's transpiring, I'll get the doctor's boy to find out all about it. I ain't curious, but I am determined to keep things right.'

The poison thus gathered in solitude, is soon spread in fatal doses through the community .-Her whispers, nods, or open remarks, all do their work, and misery is too often the consequence.

STEEL AND GOLD PENS .- It is said that upward of a thousand millions of steel and gold pens are manufactured in Birmingham. One establishment there manufactures for five hun-dred wholesale dealers throughout the world and puts each dealer's name on the pens he orders. The sheets of steel are reduced to the requisite tenuity by successive transits through the rolling mill operations, tended by men and boys. When reduced to the thinness of a steel pen, length about two feet, breadth two and a half to three inches, the sheets are ready for punching out the blanks. The process is performed with great rapidity, one girl of average industry and dexterity being able to punch out about one hundred gross a day. The next operation is to place the blank in a concave die, on which a slight touch from a convex punch produce the requisite shape—that of the semitube. The slits and apertures to increase the elasticity, and the maker's or vender's name or mark are produced by a similar tool. Previously, however, the pen undergoes a variety of other processes. When completed all but the slit, it is soft and pliable, and may be bent or twisted in the hand like a piece of thin lead .-Being collected in the grosses or great grosses, the pens are thrown into the little iron square boxes, and placed in a furnace, where they remain till box and pens are white heat. They are then taken out and thrown, hissing hot, into pails or tanks of oil, where they may be broken like so many wafers; after draining they are made to revolve rapidly in a perforated cylin-

A druggist sent his Irish porter into a darkened cellar, soon after, hearing a noise, he went to the opaning and called out: "Patrick, keep your eyes skinned!" "Och! deuce an sye," rowred Pat, but it's my nose that's skint entirely."

PROGRESS OF GOOD -- We perceive, amid all the admixtures of evil and all disorder of conflicting agencies, a general tendency, nevertheless, towards the accomplishment of wise and beneficent designs. As in contemplating an ebbing tide we are sometimes in doubt, on a short inspection, whether the sea is really receding, because from time to time a wave will dash farther up the shore than that which had preceded it; but if we continue our observations long enough we plainly see that the boundary of the land is, on the whole advancing; turies, and through several ages, we may dis-tinctly perceive the tendencies in which would has not at some time or other, come under the have escaped our more confined research.

> A Knowing One .- "Mr. Brown," said a constable to this ubiquitous personage the other day, "how many cows do you own;"

"Why do you ask;" was the query.
"Because I wish to levy on them," was the rompt rejoinder.

"Well, let me see," Mr. B abstractedly, "how many cows does the law allow me;"

"Two," replied the constable. "Two," said Mr. B with good natured astonishment, "Well, if the law allows me two, I wish it would make haste and send the other along, as I havn't but one!"

An Eastern editor says that a man in New York got himself into trouble by marrying two

A Western editor replies by assuring his cosweetness turned into the bitterness of woe, by temporary that a good many men in that secthe infusion of her cruel doubts. Many a young tion have done the same thing by marrying

> A Southern editor says that he was bothered nough by simply being found in company with another man's wife.

A BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT .- When engineers would bridge a stream, they often carry over at first but a single thread. With that, they next stretch a wire across. Then strand is added to strand, until a foundation is laid for planks; and now the bold engineer finds safe footway and walks from side to side. - So God worked almost to death, while her stuck-up takes from us some golden threaded pleasure, and stretches it hence into heaven. Then he takes a child, and then a friend. Thus he where she gets the money to buy all these bridges death, and teaches the thoughts of the things, but I can guess. She and Mr. Yardly, most timid to find their way hither and thither between the shores.
