His face was no ways beautiful,
For with small-pox't was scarred across;
And the shoulders of the ugly dog
Were almost double a yard across.
O, the lump of an Irishman—
The whiskey devouring Irishman—
The great he-rogue with his wonderful brogue—the fighting, rioting Irishman!

One of his eyes was bottle green, And the other eyo was out, my dear;
And the other eyo was out, my dear;
And the calves of his wicked-looking legs
Were more than two feet about, my dear!
O, the great big Irishman—
The rattling, battling Irishman— The stamping, ramping, swaggering, staggering, lathering swash of an Irishman."

He took so much of Lundy-foot He took so much of Lundy-loot
That he used to snort and snuffle-O
And in shape and size the fellow's neck
Was as bad as the neck of a buffalo.
O, the horrible Irishman—
The thundering, blundering Irishman—
The slashing, dashing, smashing, lashing, thrashing, hashing Irishman. hashing Irishman.

His name was a terrible name indeed, Being Timothy Thady Mulligan; And whenever he emptied his tumbler of punch He'd not rest till he'd filled it full again;

The boozing, bruising Irishman—
The 'toxicated Irishman—
The whiskey, frisky, rummy, gummy, brandy, no dandy Irishman.

This was the lad the lady loved,
Like all the girls of quality;
And he broke the skulls of the men of Leith, Just by the way of jollity; O, the leathering Irishman-The barbarous, savage frishman—
The hearts of the maids and the gentlemen's head were bothered I'm sure by this Irishman.

Tough Stories.

An Englishman, who was traveling on the Mississippi river, told some rather tough stories about London thieves. A Cincinnati chap, named Case, heared these narratives with a silent but expressive humph! and then remarked that the Western thieves beat the London operatives all hollow.

"How so?" inquired the Englishman, with surprise. "Pray, sir, have you lived much in the West?" "Not a great deal. I undertook to set up in business in Des Moines Rapids, a while ago, but the rascally people stole nearly everything I had, and at last a Welsh miner ran off with my wife." "Good gracious!" exclaimed the Englishman,

"and have you never found her?" "Never, to this day. But that was not the "Worse! Why what could be worse than stealing a man's wife?"

"Stealing his children, I should say," said the implacable Case.

"Children!" "Yes, a negro woman, who hadn't any of her own, abducted my youngest daughter, and sloped and joined the Indians."
"Did you see her?"

"See her! yes; and she hadn't ten rods the start of me; but she plunged into the lake and swam off like a duck, and there wasn't a canoe tc follow her with." The Englishman leaned back in his chair and called for another mug of "alf-and-'alf," while Case smoked his cigar and eyed his credulous friend at the same time most remorselessly.

"I-I shan't go any farther West, I think," at last observed the excited Englishman.

"I should not advise any one to go," said Case quietly. "My brother once lived there, but he had to leave, although his business was the best in the country." "What business was he in?"

"The lumber busines. He had a saw mill." "And they stole the lumber?"

"Yes, and saw-logs too."

"Saw-logs?" "Yes, whole dozens of the black walnuts logs were carried away in a single night." "Is it possible?"

"True, upon my honor, sir. He tried every way to prevent it, had hired men to watch his logs, but it was all of no use. They would take them all away as easy as if there had been no one there. They would steal them out of the cove and even out of the mill house?" "Good gracious!"

"Just to give you an idea of how they can steal out there," sending a sly wink at the lis-tening company "just to give you an idea—did you ever work on a saw-mill?"

"Well one day my brother bought an allfiered fine black walnut—four feet three at the butt, and not a knot in it. He was determined to keep that log anyhow, and hired two Scotch-men to watch it all night. Well, they took a small demijohn of whiskey with them, snaked the log up the hill above the mill, built a fire and then sat down on the log to play cards just to keep awake, you see. Twas a monstrous big log, bark two inches thick.

"Well, as I was saying, they played cards and drank whiskey all night, and when it began to grow light went to sleep astraddle of the log. About a minute after daylight brother George went over to the mill to see how they were getting on, and the log was gone,"

"What were the Scotchmen doing?" "Sitting on the bark! The thieves had driven an iron wedge into the butt end, which pointed down the hill, and hitched a yoke of oxen on and pulled it right out of the shell, leaving the Scotchmen there astraddle of it, fast asleep, Fact!"

MODERN REFINEMENTS .- People do not laugh now-a-days-they indulge in merriment. They do not walk—they promenade. They never eat any food—they masticate it. Nobody has a tooh pulled out—it is extracted. No one has his feelings hurt-they are lacerated, Young men do not go courting girls they pay young ladies attention. It is vulgar to visit any one -you must make a call. Of course, you would not think of going to bed-you would retire to rest. Nor would you build a house-you would erect it. One buys drugs at a "medical hall." wines of a "company," and shoes at a "mart; Blacking is dispensed at an "institution," and meat from a "purveyor." One would imagine that the word "shop," had been discovered not to belong to the English language,—Now-adays, all the shops are "warehouses" or 'bazaars," and you will hardly find a person having the hardibood to call himself a shopkneper, "Workpeople." are "employeer" "ten meetings," are "soirees," and "singers" are "ustistes,"

A New Kind of Soap. NEW kind of Soap has recently been invented

A NEW kind of Soap has recently been invented which promises to supersede all other kinds of hard soap. It is used extensively for washing clothes and possesses the remarkable property of extricating the dirt without boiling the clothes and without the use of the rubbing board. The process of washing requires less than half the time, and only about half the labor, by using this Patont Soap. This article is peculiarly excellent, and superior to any thing else called Soap; because while it saves time and labor, it never rots or injures the clothes. It is just the article it is represented to be, and never disappoints the expectations of purchasors. It does not take out stains. For sale at ROY'S Drug Store, Wellsboro, Pa.
