

IS IT ANYBODY'S BUSINESS?

Is it anybody's business, if a gentleman should choose to wait upon a lady, or if the lady don't refuse? Or to speak a little plainer, that the meaning all may know, is it anybody's business, if a lady has a beau? Is it anybody's business, when that gentleman doth call, or when he leaves the lady, or if he leaves her at all? Or is it necessary, that the curtains should be drawn, to save from further trouble, the outside lookers on? Is it anybody's business, but the lady's, if her beau, kisseth out with other ladies, and doesn't let her know? Is it anybody's business, but the gentleman's, if she should accept another escort, when he doesn't change to be? If a person on the sidewalk, whether great or whether small, is it anybody's business, where that person meant to call? Or if you see a person, while he's calling anywhere, is it anybody's business, what his business may be there? The substance of our query, simply stated, would be this: Is it anybody's business, what another's business is? Whether 'tis, or whether 'tisn't, we should really like to know, for we're certain, if it isn't, there are some who make it so. If it is, we'll join the rabble, and act the noble part of the tattlers and defamers, who through the public mart; but if not we'll act the teacher, until each meddler learns, it were better in the future, to mind his own concerns!

The Editor.

It would require a master hand to sketch with fidelity, that poor, abstruse class, known as editors. As a copywriter, remarks, he may be the "responsible," the "foreign," the "literary," "local," the "commercial,"—in either department he is the subject of laudation, abuse, trials and triumphs. He must have a ready pen, remarkable versatility of knowledge, a correct judgment, and considerable nerve. If you intrude upon him, you will discover him writing, reading, scissoring. He will talk, but his pen does not stop; he spatters the ink; he tumbles over the books; he hunts among newspapers; he grows savage in a "leader," or he is learned in a "review." Politicians want to buy him; needy artists ask his favorable notice; inventors have models to show him; some want to thank him—others desire to shoot him. He is addressed upon more subjects than it was ever intended a single mind should comprehend; and, while his journal is called by some "diffusional," "valuable," etc., there are those who blantly pronounce it "scurrilous" and "poor." Swimming upon floods of excitement, battling, chafing, arguing, consenting, exalting friends and crushing foes, thinking, working, is the sum and substance of an editor's career. At home, he writes with his wife at his elbow, and his child on his knee; in the streets he weaves out those ideas which, in a few hours, will startle the men who now jostle and crowd; in his sanctum, he makes ready thunderbolts, moulded with his pen, but more powerful than any hurled from Jove. He delivers lectures; he is a politician; he holds office; he is a traveler; he gives a verdict upon manuscripts which are more precious than the apple of his eye to aspiring authors; he helps on the opera; he bolsters the drama; he pleads for the poor, he snubs the rich; he conciliates, he defies; he arouses nations, he dethrones kings; he is the guardian of liberty, and omnipotent. Up in garrets, in out of the way places—sometimes furnished like a parlor, sometimes worse than a pig-pen—is his sanctum sanctorum, the "holly of hollies." Are you partial to frowns? Do you wish to hear a growl? Disregard the notices of "Editor's Room," "Private," "No Admittance," and enter the den—You observe the contracting brow; you do not know whether you are saluted or insulted; your tongue proposes to speak, and your legs incline to run away; a head lifts itself; a worn pen and inked fingers point you a seat which it takes you by an instant to reach, but ere you have done so, the monster has an idea so deeply in his clutches, that he has forgotten your existence. There you sit; you try to count the pyramids of newspapers, and wonder if, to be an editor, it is necessary to be a savage. You see books and maps; but you would as soon meddle with the cub of a bear as anything in which the wild beast before you has an interest. Delegations of "Devis," and a great many things going on which are strange to you. Other genteel come in who glance contemptuously at yourself. They seat themselves, and you hear nothing but scratch, scratch, with gold pens, steel pens and goose quills; they pull at their whiskers; they clear their throats; they look up at the ceiling; they help each other when their ideas run aground; they write and re-write, they expunge and amend; they become cheerful, if their productions please them, and crusty if they do not. Now, remember that this mental toil must go on by day and by night, when the head is dizzy with sickness, and heart weary with sadness, that it entails study, research and thought; that the themes are suggested and must be discussed within the hour; and you will understand why you are not wanted in an editor's sanctum. Presently, however, he will talk to you; he will cut short your long speeches; he will bring you directly to your business; he will dispatch it; and you will at once discover that necessity, if not inclination, urges him to resume his pen. In summer, when the flowers are so tempting, at midnight, with the glare of artificial light pouring upon him, there he is—a toiling slave. He writes of your pleasures—he adds to your joys. Do you ever think of his exhausted brain, his fading life, his premature death? Literature was perhaps, a passion of his boyhood, and he has pursued the wicked phantom from year to year, finding, in the gratification of a refined taste, some new reward for his painful infatuation.—Printer's News Letter.

AFFECTING.—A person following close behind a couple returning from a juvenile party at a fashionable residence in Pittsfield, a few weeks since, happened to overhear the young gentleman thus address his companion in a voice of the most tender solicitude: "Charlotte Angelina, you must not set your youthful affections on me, for I am doomed to an early grave—mother says I'm troubled with the worms." An involuntary cough from the listener interrupted the self-devoting reply which, of course, was leading to Charlotte Angelina's lips.
