MANSFIELD CLASSICAL SEMINARY .- The Spring an of this Institution commenced on the 29th ult., the very favorable auspices. I The Trustees had Atteded in completing the entire north wing of the adding, thus affording better accommodations for tients. They are now vigorously prosecuting the tel on the remainder of the building and we underlati intend to have it fully completed by the first of ligast next, thus affording accommodations for a "It number of students. The people of this county Lot seem to fully realize the importance of this In Listion or the magnitude of the enterprise,

Here is an institution growing up in our own midst turpased by but few it any in Southern New York Northurn Pennsylvania. Its arrangements are un-"ialed. The students' rooms are very large and tesant while the halls, and recitation rooms are Ttudid. Its spacious Chapel, named "Parkhurst "," in houser of Joel Parkhurst, Esq., of Elkland, and oubtedly the finest room in the county.

To the founders and patrons of this school our peois are under great obligations, particularly to those striduals who for the last two years have devoted the means and time, and energies to the work of retiding. It is no easy task to build an institution At the one first erected in a village like Mansfield, to erest one of such magnitude as the present on trains of the former is a Herculean task. And to hat the friends of this Seminary have devoted Statelves, and prominent among them is the Presithe of the Board, S. B. Elliott, giving up a liberal as permanent salary and taking hold of this enter-He with but small prospects of remuneration or rehe except the satisfaction of aiding in a work so mately connected with the welfare of the people. late is no question of the support of the school The then building is completed. Even with the presthe commodations there are about one hundred stutes in attendance.
