But the Constitution has not only conferred these high powers upon Congress, but it has adopted effective means to restrain the States from interfering with their exercise. For that purpose it has, in strong prohibitory language, expressly, declared that "no State shall enter into any treats alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bells of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts." Moreover, "without the consent of Congress, no State shall lay any imposts or duties on any imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its impection laws," and, if they exceed this amount, the excess shall belong to the United

And "no Sine shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage; keep troops, or ships of war in time of peace; enter into any agreement or compact with another State, on with a foreign power; or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay."

In order still further to secure the uninter rupted exercise of these high powers against State interposition, it it provided "that this Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."?
The solemn sanction of religion has been superadded to the obligations of official duty, and all senature and representatives of the United States, all me hers of State legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, "both of the United States and the several States, shall be bound by oath for affirmation to support this Constitution."

In order to ourry into effect these powers, the Constitution has established a perfect Government in all its forms, Legislative, Executive, and Judicial; and this Government, to the extent of its powers, acts directly upon the individual citizens of every State, and executes its own decrees by the agency of its own officers. In this respect a differs entirely from the Government under the old Confederation, which was confined to making requisitions on the States in their govereign character. This left it in the discretion of each whether to obey or to refuse, and, shey often declined to comply with such requisitions. It thus became necessury, for the pipose of removing this barrier, and "in order to form a more perfect Union," to establish a Government which could act directly upon the peorle, and execute its own laws without the intermediate agency of the States. This has been accomplished by the Constitution of the United States.

In short, the Fovernment created by the Constaution, and driving its authority from the sovereign people of each of the several States, has precisely the same right to exercise its powor over the people of all these States, in the enumerated cases, that each one of them possesses over subjects not delegated to the United States but "received to the States, respectively, or to the people

To the extent of the delegated powers the Constitution of the United States is as much a part of the conditution of each State, and is as binding upon it people, as though it had been textually inserted therein.

This Government, therefore, is a great and powerful Government, invested with all the attributes of sovereignty over their special sub-jects to which is authority extends. Its fram-en never interded to implant in its bosom the seeds of its own destruction, nor were they at its creation guilty of the absurdity of providing for its own dissolution. It was not intended by its samers to be the baseless fabric of a vision which, at the touch of the enchant-et, would vanish into thin air, but a substantial and mighty fabric, capable of resisting the slow decay of time and of defying the storms of ages. Indeed, well may the jealous patricis of that day have indulged fears that a government of such high powers might violate the reserved rights of the States, and wisely did they adopt the rule of a strict construction of these powers to prevent the danger! But they did not fear, non had they any reason to imagine, that the Constitution would ever be so interpreted as to enable any State, by her own act, and without the consent of her sister States. to discharge lies people from all or any of their Federal obligations.

It may be asked, then, are the people of the States without redress against the tyranny and no means. The right of resistance on the part of the governed gainst the oppression of their governments cannot be denied. It exists independently of all constitutions, and has been excruised at all periods of the world's history. . Under it eld governments have been destroyed, and new ones have taken their place. It is em-Declaration Independence. But the distinction must ever be observed; that this is revolution against an established Government, and not a voluntary secession from it by virtue of an inherent constitution right. In short, let us look the danger fairly in the face: Secession is neither more not less than revolution. It may or it may not less a justifiable revolution, but still it is revolution.

What, in the meantime, is the responsibility and true position of the Executive? He is bound by soleins out before God and the country "to take chreethat the laws be faithfully executed," and gom this obligation he cannot be absolved by say human power. But what if the perform the of this duty, in whole or in part, has been rendered impracticable by events over which he could have exercised no control? Such, at the present moment is the case throughout the State of South Carolina, so far as the laws of the United States to secure the administration of justice by the Federal Judiciary are concerned. All the Federal officers within its limits, through whose agency alone these laws can be carried into executian, have already resigned. We no longer have a district judge, a district attorney, or a marshal, in South Carolina. In fact, the whole machinery of the Federal Government necessary for the distribu-

The invention is applicable to article being lowered. The invested is applicative various purposes; its use in connection with wells may be mentioned as an instance in which the buckets, after being raised and emptied, may be easily lowered, and their movement retarded at the proper time, so that they will not violently strike the water. Scitific American. For the purpose of Raising and Lowering Buckets in Wells, it is decidedly THE GREATEST IMPROVEMENT OF THE AGE. The Brake acts as a check upon the backward motion of the bucket, without turning the crank. (the crank acting as a brake, by pressing inward at the handle.)

All who examine this machine, will at once acknowl-

PRACTICABILITY AND SUPERIORITY, Over every other machine in use. The operation of the windless is easily controlled with, and requires but ONE HAND. It combines all the advantages of the oldfashioned with the self-emptying bucket, and adds many new and useful improvements. It can be adapted to wells of any depth, and will raise easily, with ordinary turning, Five Buckets of water per minute! from wells of ordinary depth, and in the same proportion to the depth of two hundred feet.

The windlass and brake is also applicable to faising and lowering any kind of weight, and in every respect is far superior to those heretofors in use. Having purchased the right for the Counties of Tio-ga and Potter, Pa., the undersigned are prepared to offer for sale township rights for the manufacture and Dryers without this, necessarily bring the clothes so low as to be in the way of everything passing beneath, and yet so high as to make the hang ing on and taking off the clothes, a work of labor and inconvenience. For instance, to take off frozen clothes in winter, from a common line, in easy reach, is bad enough, but when it has got to be done standing on tip-toe, and reaching up, it is tedious in the extreme. The Challenge Dryer can be lowered as easily as it can be raised, by the same jack, so as to come within the easy reach of a child. The operation of hoisting and lowering is as simple as that of working a pump handle.

Nothing can exceed the favor with which they are received, and we refer to this and their rapidly increasing sales and to the testimonials of those who have used them as proof of their intrinsic value. One of the best proofs of their superiority, is found in the fact that numbers of persons who had bought other Dryers, have thrown them aside and are using the Challenge Dryer. In every point of economy, convenience and durability, it challenges the world.
