

but very egregious mistake to suppose the long words are more genteel than short ones—juki as the same sort of people imagine high colors and flashy figures improve the style of dress. They are the kind of folks who don't begin, but always "commence." They don't live, but "Preside." They don't go to bed, but mysteri-auely "retire." They don't eat or drink, but "partake of refreshments." They are never sick, but "extremely indisposed." And in-stead of dying, at last, they "decease." The strength of the English langange is in the shirt words—chiefly monosyllables of Saxon deriva-tion—and people who are in-earnest seldom use any other. Love, hate, anger, grief, joy, ar press themselves in short words and direct spin-delight in what Horace calls "verbi sesquipeda-lia" — words a "foot and a half" long. her precious Ike, and remarked as follows "How the world has turned about to be sure, said she; "'tis nothing but change, change ! Only yesterday, as it were, I was in the country smelling the odious flowers; to-day I am in this big city, my oilfactories breathing the impure execrations of coal smoke that are so dilatory to health. Instead of the singing of birds the humblebusses almost deprive me of consciousness. Dear me ! Well, I hope I may be restrained through it all. They say that the moral turpentine of this city is frightful; but it is n't any use to participate trouble beforehand; he may escape all harmonious influences that would flave a tendernesa to hurt him ; and, as the minister of our parish said, with judicial training he may become a useful membrane of society; though training is bad generally, and is apt to make the young run to feathers like oropple-crowned hens. But he has genius, (looking at him,) it comes natural to him, like the the measles, and every day it is enveloping itself more and more."
