THE MEN WHO FELL IN BALTIMORE.

THEY are the six Massachusetts soldiers, who fell in the fight for the flag in Baltimore, Maryland, on the 25th of May, 1861. Their names are: Corporal John W. Peck, Private George W. Peck, Private George W. Peck, Private George W. Peck, Private George W. Peck, Private George W. Peck.

And that's yer here! sed I, larfin wan of my silvery larfs. I thawt if he wanted to jock lde give some of my sparklin epygrams. Sir, you are inscient. The plain question is, will you hawl down the Star Spangled Banner and hist the Southern flag!

THE SHOW IS CONFISCATED. Ya hee perhaps wundeared whereabouts I was for these many days gone and past. Perhaps you sposed I'd gone to the Toom of the Capytals, tho I don't know what those is. It's a popper-nospaper frasse.

THE BRITISH FLAG HUMBLED. One of the first consequences to British merchants, of their government's hasty recognition of our minsters as "belligerents," will be the detention and search of British ships in every sea where Davis can find a safe harbor.

THE BIRD AMONG THE OIL. All the papers have been full, for months, of marvellous accounts of the coal oil discoveries in Pennsylvania and elsewhere; but the Monongahela (Pa.) Republican gets off by far the best blue-quest in the exaggerations of the oil reports, which we have seen.

THE MEN WHO FELL IN BALTIMORE (continued). Next came the Massachusetts men, gathered from city, glade and glen; to hate the South, but love for all. They answered to their country's call. The path to them seemed broad and bright, they sought no foe and no fight.

PROM CAMP CURTIN.

Old Sol blazes away to-day from his throne in the heavens, with unwonted vigor and determination; and the sweating soldiers, the singing birds, and the green fields remind me that summer is at hand.

THE MEN WHO FELL IN BALTIMORE (continued). And that's yer here! sed I, larfin wan of my silvery larfs. I thawt if he wanted to jock lde give some of my sparklin epygrams. Sir, you are inscient.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

Sir: Allow me your journal to make a few remarks upon the complications of the United States of America, which, I am surprised to find, are so little understood this side of the Atlantic.

1. "What are we fighting for?" "We, the people of the United States of America" (to use the language of our Constitution), are fighting to maintain our nationality, and the principles of liberty upon which it was founded—that nationality which Great Britain has pledged herself, both by past comity and the sacred obligations of treaty to respect; those great principles of liberty, that all power is derived from the consent of the governed; trial by jury, freedom of speech, and the press; that "without law there is no liberty"—which we inherited from Great Britain herself, and which, having been found to Jio at the base of all progress and civilization, we desire to perpetuate for ourselves and the future of all the nations.

The professed friends of the independence of nations and popular rights, they have not only overthrown the Constitution of the United States; but the Constitution of the "Confederate States" themselves, refusing in every case to refer their new usurpations to the votes of the people, thus making themselves doubly traitors to both the States and the nation.

2. "But can you subdue the revolted States?" Of course we can. The whole seven revolted States (2,173,000) have not as much white population as the single State of New York (3,851,563) by 1,500,000 people. If all the States were to make common cause, they have only 8,997,894 whites with 4,000,000 slaves, while the Union has about 20,000,000 of homogeneous people, as powerful in peace and war as the world has seen. Intelligent, hardy, and "many sided," their late apparent lethargy and weakness was the self-possession of enormous strength. When they had made up their minds that force was necessary, they moved upon Washington with such speed, numbers, and steadiness as is not surpassed in history.
