

Terms of Publication.
THE TIOGA COUNTY AGITATOR is published every Wednesday Morning, and mailed to subscribers at the very reasonable price of
ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM.
It is intended to notify every subscriber when the term for which he has paid shall have expired, by the figures on the printed label on the margin of each paper. The paper will then be stopped until a further remittance be received. By this arrangement no man can be brought in debt to the printer.
The AGITATOR is the Official Paper of the County, with a large and steadily increasing circulation reaching into every neighborhood in the County. It is sent free of postage to any subscriber within the county limits, but whose most convenient post office may be in an adjoining County.
Business Cards, not exceeding 5 lines, paper included, $3 per year.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.
CRYSTAL FOUNTAIN HOTEL.
DAVID HART, PROPRIETOR.
The undersigned begs leave to announce to his old friends and to the public generally, that he has taken possession of the old stand and fitted it up in good style, and intends to keep it as a Temperance Hotel. No parties will be spared to accommodate the traveling public. Good stabling and a good horse always on hand. Prices to suit the times. - DAVID HART.

JAS. LOWREY & S. F. WILSON,
ATTORNEYS & COUNSELLORS AT LAW, will attend the Court of Tioga, Potter and McKean Counties. (Wellsboro, Feb. 1, 1861.)

C. N. DART, DENTIST,
OFFICE at his residence near the Academy. All work pertaining to his line of business done promptly and satisfactorily.
(April 22, 1861.)

DICKINSON HOUSE
CORNING, N. Y.
Proprietor,
Guests taken to and from the Depot free of charge.

J. C. WHITTAKER,
Hydrographic Physician and Surgeon.
ELKLAND, TIOGA CO., PENNA.
Will visit patients at all parts of the County, or receive them for treatment at his house. [June 14.]

J. EMERY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW
Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa. Will devote his office exclusively to the practice of Law. Collections made in any of the Northern counties of Pennsylvania. nov17, 1861.

PENNSYLVANIA HOUSE.
Corner of Main Street and the Avenue, Wellsboro, Pa.
J. W. BIGONY, PROPRIETOR.
This popular Hotel, having been re-fitted and re-furnished throughout, is now open to the public as a first-class house.

ISAAC WALTON HOUSE,
E. C. FERMLYEA, PROPRIETOR.
Gaines, Tioga County, Pa.
THIS is a new hotel located within easy access of the best fishing and hunting grounds in Northern Pa. No parties will be spared for the accommodation of pleasure seekers and the traveling public.
April 12, 1860.

G. C. CAMPBELL,
BARBER AND HAIR-DRESSER.
SHOP in the rear of the Post Office. Everything in his line will be done as well and promptly as it can be done in the city saloons. Preparations for retaining hair, and beautifying the hair, for coloring hair, and whitening the hair of any color. Call and see. Wellsboro, Sept. 22, 1858.

THE CORNING JOURNAL.
George W. Pratt, Editor and Proprietor.
Published at Corning, Steuben Co., N. Y., at One Dollar and Fifty Cents per year, in advance. The Journal is Republican in politics, and has a circulation reaching into every part of Steuben County. Those desirous of extending their business into that and the adjoining counties will find it an excellent advertising medium. Address as above.

WELLSBORO HOTEL,
WELLSBORO, PA.
E. S. FARR, PROPRIETOR.
(Formerly of the United States Hotel.)
Having leased this well known and popular House, which has been the patronage of the public with attentive and obliging waiters, together with the Proprietor's knowledge of the business, he hopes to make the stay of those who stop with him both pleasant and agreeable.
Wellsboro, May 31, 1860.

PICTURE FRAMING.
TOILET GLASSES, Portraits, Pictures, Certificates, Engravings, Needle Work, &c., &c., framed in the most elegant manner, in plain and ornamental gilt. Also Wood, Black Walnut, Oak, Mahogany, &c. Personal leaving any article for framing, can receive them next day framed in any style they wish and hung for free. Specimens at SMITH'S BOOK STORE.

E. B. BENERICT, M. D.,
WOULD inform the public that he permanently located in Elkland Boro, Tioga Co., Pa., and is prepared by thirty years' experience to treat all diseases of the eyes, and their appendages on scientific principles, and that he can cure without fail, that painful disease, called St. Vitus' Dance, (Chorea, St. Vitus' and will attend to any other business in the line of Physic and Surgery.
Elkland Boro, August 8, 1860.

NEW FLOUR AND FEED STORE
IN WELLSBORO.
The subscriber would respectfully inform the people of Wellsboro and vicinity that he has opened a
FLOUR & FEED STORE
at the above Dr. Gibson's Drug Store, on Main St., where he will keep constantly on hand as good an assortment of FLOUR and FEED as can be found in the market, which he will sell cheap for cash. Also, a large assortment of Choice Wines and Liquors, of a superior quality, and warranted free from adulteration, which he will sell to the trade and at wholesale, cheaper than any other establishment in Southern Pennsylvania.
Wellsboro, Dec. 19, 1860.

CHARLESTON FLOURING MILLS.
WRIGHT & BAILEY,
Having secured the best mills in the County, are now prepared to do
Custom Work, Merchant Work, and in fact everything that can be done in Country Mills, so as to give perfect satisfaction.
FLOUR, MEAL AND FEED.
AT WHOLESALE OR RETAIL,
at our store in Wellsboro, or at the mill. Cash or exchange for grain at the market price.
All goods delivered free of charge within the county.
WRIGHT & BAILEY,
Wellsboro, Feb. 13, 1861.

NEW BOOT, SHOE, LEATHER & FINDING STORE
The undersigned, having leased the store formerly occupied by G. W. West, intends carrying on all the branches of the shoe and leather trade. Competent workmen are employed in the Manufacturing Department, and all work warranted to be our own manufacture.
Also, all kinds of
READY-MADE BOOTS AND SHOES, constantly on hand. All kinds of Leather and Shoe Findings constantly on hand and for sale at low prices for cash or ready pay.
SADDLES and BRIDLES taken in exchange for Goods at the highest market price. J. O. RIBBOLD, Wellsboro, Sept. 5, 1860.

HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE,
ALL KINDS, can be found at the rooms of
E. D. WELLS, LAWRENCEVILLE.

THE AGITATOR.

Devoted to the Extension of the Area of Freedom and the Spread of Healthy Reform.

WHILE THERE SHALL BE A WRONG UNRIGHTED, AND UNTIL "MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN" SHALL CEASE, AGITATION MUST CONTINUE.

VOL. VII. WELLSBORO, TIOGA COUNTY, PA., WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 17, 1861. NO. 49.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.
Fellow-Citizens of the Senate
And of the House of Representatives:
HISTORICAL SUMMARY.
Having been convened on an extraordinary occasion, authorized by the constitution, your attention is not called to any ordinary subject of legislation.

At the beginning of the present Presidential term, four months ago, the functions of the federal government were found to be generally suspended within the several States of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Florida, excepting those only of the Postoffice Department.

Within these States all the forts, arsenals, dock yards, custom houses, and the like, including the movable and stationary property in and about them, had been seized and held in open hostility to this government; excepting only Forts Pickens, Taylor and Jefferson, on and near the Florida coast, and Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor, South Carolina.

The forts thus seized had been put in improved condition, new ones had been built, and armed forces had been organized, and were organizing, all avowedly with the same hostile purpose. The forts remaining in the possession of the Federal government in and near these States were either besieged or menaced by warlike preparations; and especially Fort Sumter was nearly surrounded by well-protected hostile batteries, with guns equal in quality to the best of its own, and outnumbering the latter, perhaps two to one.

A disproportionate share of the Federal muskets and rifles had somehow found their way into these States, and had been seized to be used against the government. Accumulations of the public revenue lying within them had been seized for the same object. The navy was scattered in distant seas, leaving but a small portion of it within the reach of the government. Officers of the Federal army and navy had resigned in great numbers, and of those resigning a large proportion had taken up arms against the government.

Simultaneously, and in connection with all this, the purpose to sever the Federal Union was openly avowed. In accordance with this purpose an ordinance had been adopted in each of these States, declaring these States respectively to be separated from the National Union. A formula for instituting a combined government of these States had been promulgated, and their illegal organization in the character of Confederate States was already invoking recognition, aid and intervention from foreign powers.

Finding this condition of things, and believing it to be the imperative duty upon the Executive to prevent, if possible, the consummation of such an attempt to destroy the Federal Union, a choice of means to that end became indispensably.

This choice was made and declared in the Inaugural address. The policy chosen looked to the exhaustion of all peaceable measures before a resort to any stronger ones. It sought only to hold the public places and property not already arrested from the government, and to collect the revenues, relying on the rest for time, discussion and the ballot-box.

It promised a continuance of the mails at government expense to the vast people who were resisting the government, and it gave repeated pledges against any disturbance to any of the people or any of their rights—of all that a President might constitutionally and justifiably do in such a case. Everything was forborne without which it was deemed possible to keep the government on foot.

On the 5th of March, the present incumbent's first full day in office, a letter from Major Anderson, commanding at Fort Sumter, written on the 28th of February, and received at the War Department on the 4th of March, was by that Department placed in his hands. This letter proffered the professional opinion of the writer that reinforcements could not be thrown into that fort within the time for his release rendered necessary by the limited supply of provisions, and with a view of holding possession of the same with a force of less than 20,000 good and well-disciplined men. This opinion was concurred in by all the officers of his command, and their memorandums on the subject were made enclosures of Major Anderson's letter.

The whole was immediately laid before Lieut. Gen. Scott, who at once concurred with Major Anderson in opinion. On reflection, however, he took full time, consulting with officers both of the army and navy, and at the end of four days came reluctantly but decidedly to the same opinion as before. He also stated, at the same time that no such sufficient force was then at the control of the government, or could be raised and brought to the ground within the time in which the provisions in the fort would be exhausted.

In a purely military point of view this reduced the duty of the administration in the case to the mere matter of getting the garrison safely out of the fort. It was believed, however, that to so abandon that position under the circumstances would be utterly ruinous; that the necessity under which it was done could not be fully understood; that by many it would be considered as a part of a voluntary policy; that at home it would disorganize the friends of the Union, embolden its adversaries, and go far to ensure to the latter a recognition abroad. That in fact it would be our national destruction consummated. This could not be allowed.

troops had been transferred from the Brooklyn, acting upon some quasi-armistice of the late administration, and of the existence of which the present administration, up to the time at which the order was dispatched, had only too vague and uncertain rumors to fix attention, had refused to land the troops. To now reinforce Fort Pickens before a crisis could be reached at Fort Sumter was impossible, rendered so by the near exhaustion of provisions in the latter named fort.

In preparation against such a conjuncture, the government had a few days before commenced preparing an expedition as well adopted as might be to relieve Fort Sumter, which expedition was intended to be ultimately used or not, according to circumstances. The strong-est anticipated case for using it was now presented, and it was resolved to send it forward.

As had been intended in this contingency, it was also resolved to inform the Governor of South Carolina that he might expect an attempt would be made to provision the fort, and that if the attempt should not be resisted, there would be no effort to throw in men, arms or ammunition without further notice, or in case of an attack upon the fort. This notice was accordingly given, whereupon the fort was attacked and bombarded to its fall, without even awaiting the arrival of the provisioning expedition.

It is thus seen that the assault and reduction of Fort Sumter was in no sense a matter of self-defense on the part of the assailants. They well knew that the garrison in the fort could by no possibility commit aggression upon them. They knew they were expressly notified that the giving of bread to the few brave and hungry men of the garrison was all that would on that occasion be attempted, unless themselves by resisting so much should provoke more.

They knew that this government desired to keep the garrison in the fort, not to assail them, but merely to maintain visible possession, and thus to preserve the Union from actual and immediate dissolution, trusting, as heretofore stated, to time, discussion and the ballot-box for final adjustment; and they assailed and reduced the fort for precisely the reverse object—to drive out the visible authority of the Federal Union, and thus force it to immediate dissolution. That this was their object the Executive well understood.

And having said to them in his inaugural address "you can have no conflict without being yourself the aggressor," he took pains not only to keep their declaration good, but also to keep the case so free from the power of Virginia sophistry, as that the world should not be able to understand it. By the affair at Fort Sumter, with the surrounding circumstances, that point was reached.

Then and thereby the assailants of the government began the conflict of arms, without a gun in sight or in expectancy to return their fire, save only the few in the fort, sent to that harbor years before for their own protection, and still ready to give that protection in whatever was lawful.

DISSOLUTION OR BLOOD.
In this act, demanding all else, they have forced upon the country the distinct issue—immediate dissolution or blood. And this issue embraces more than the fate of these United States. It presents to the whole family of man the question whether a constitutional republic or democracy, a government of the people by the same people can or cannot maintain its territorial integrity against their own domestic foes. It presents the question whether discontented individuals, too few in numbers to control the administration; according to organic law in any case, can always upon the pretences made in its case, or on other pretences, or arbitrarily without any pretence, break up their government, and thus practically put an end to free government upon the earth.

It forces us to ask: Is there in all republics this inherent and fatal weakness? Must a government of necessity be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence? So viewing the issue no choice was left but to call out the war power of the government, and so to resist force employed for its destruction by force for its preservation.

This call was made, and the response of the country was most gratifying, surpassing in unanimity and spirit the most sanguine expectations. Yet none of the States commonly called slave States, except Delaware, gave a regiment through regular State organization. A few regiments have been organized within some others of these States by individual enterprise and received into the government service.

Of course the seceded States, so called, and to which Texas had been joined about the time of the inauguration, gave no troops to the cause of the Union. The Border States, so called, were not uniform in their action—some of them being almost for the Union, while in others, as Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas, the Union sentiment was very nearly repressed and silenced.

VIRGINIA'S COURSE.
The course taken in Virginia was the most remarkable, perhaps the most important. A convention elected by the people of that State to consider this very question of disrupting the Federal Union, was in session at the capital of Virginia when Fort Sumter fell.

They pushed military preparations vigorously forward all over the State; they seized the United States armory at Harper's Ferry and the navy-yard at Gosport, near Norfolk; they received, perhaps invited into their State, large bodies of troops, with their warlike appointments, from the so-called seceded States.

They formally entered into a treaty of temporary alliance and co-operation with the so-called Confederate States, and sent members to their Congress at Montgomery; and finally they permitted the insurrectionary government to be transferred to their capital at Richmond. The people of Virginia have thus allowed this great insurrection to make its nest within her borders, and this government has no choice but to deal with it where it finds it.

And it has the less regret, as the loyal citizens have, in due form, claimed its protection. These loyal citizens this government is bound to recognize and protect as being Virginia. In the Border States, so called—in fact, the Middle States—there are those who favor a policy which they call armed neutrality, that is, the arming of those States to prevent the Union forces passing one way, or the disunion the other, over their soil.

This would be disunion completed. Figuratively speaking, it would be the building of an impassable wall along the line of separation; and yet not quite an impassable one, for under the guise of neutrality, it would tie the hands of the Union men and freely pass supplies from among them to the insurrectionists which it could not do as an open enemy. As a stroke it would take all the trouble of the hands of secession, except only what proceeds from the external blockade.

It would do for the disunionists that which of all things they most desire—feed them well and give them disunion without a struggle of their own. It recognizes no fidelity to the constitution—no obligation to maintain the Union, and while very many who have favored it are doubtless loyal citizens, it is nevertheless very injurious in effect.

Recurring to the action of the government, it may be stated that at first a call was made for 75,000 militia, and rapidly following this a proclamation was issued for closing the ports of the insurrectionary districts by proceedings in the nature of a blockade. So far all was believed to be strictly legal.

At this point the insurrectionists announced their purpose to enter upon the practice of privateering. Other calls were made for volunteers to serve three years, unless sooner discharged, and also for large additions to the regular army and navy. These measures, whether strictly legal or not, were ventured upon under what appeared to be a popular demand and a public necessity, trusting, as now, that Congress would readily ratify them. It is believed that nothing has been done beyond the constitutional competency of Congress.

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.
Soon after the first call for militia, it was considered a duty to authorize the commanding general, in proper cases, according to his discretion, to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus; or in other words, to arrest and detain, without resort to the ordinary processes and forms of law, such individuals as he might deem dangerous to the public safety. This authority has purposely been exercised but very sparingly.

Nevertheless, the legality and propriety of what has been done under it are questioned, and the attention of the country has been called to the proposition that one who is sworn to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, should not himself violate them.

Of course some consideration was given to the question of power and propriety before this matter was acted upon. The whole of the laws which were required to be faithfully executed, were being resisted, and failing of execution in nearly one-third of the States, must they be allowed to finally fall of execution, even had it been perfectly clear that by the use of the means necessary to their execution some single law, made in such extreme tenderness of the citizen's liberty that practically it relieves more of the guilty than of the innocent, should to a very limited extent be violated. To state the question more directly, are all the laws but one to go unexecuted, and the government itself go to pieces lest that one be violated?

Even in such a case, would not the official oath be broken if the government should be overthrown, when it was believed that disregarding the single law would tend to preserve it? But it was not believed that this question was presented. It was not believed that any law was violated.

The provision of the constitution that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety does require it. It was decided that we have a case of rebellion, and that the public safety does require the qualified suspension of the writ which was authorized to be made. Now it is insisted that Congress and not the Executive is vested with the power. But the constitution itself is silent as to which or who is to exercise the power, and as the provision was plainly made for a dangerous emergency, it cannot be believed the framers of the instrument intended that in every case the danger should run its course until Congress could be called together, the very assembling of which might be prevented, as was intended in this case by the rebellion. No more extended argument is now offered as an opinion of some length will probably be presented by the Attorney-General. Whether there shall be any legislation upon the subject, and if any, what, is submitted entirely to the better judgment of Congress.

The reports of the Secretaries of the Treasury, War and Navy, will give the information in detail deemed necessary and convenient for your deliberation and action; while the Executive and all the departments will stand ready to supply omissions, or to communicate new facts considered important for you to know.

MEN AND MONEY WANTED.
It is now recommended that you give the legal means for making this contest a short and a decisive one; that you place at the control of the government for the work at least 400,000 men and $400,000,000. That number of men is one-tenth of those of proper ages within the regions where, apparently, all are willing to engage; and the sum is less than the twenty-third part of the money value owned by the men who seem ready to devote the whole.

A debt of six hundred millions of dollars now is a less sum per head than was the debt of our revolution when we came out of that struggle; and the money value in the country now bears even a greater proportion to what it was than that does the population. Surely each man has as strong a motive now to preserve our liberties as each had then to establish them.

A right result at this time will be worth more to the world than ten times the men and ten times the money. The evidence reaching us from the country, leaves no doubt that the material for the work is abundant, and that it needs only the hand of legislation to give it legal sanction, and the hand of the Executive to give it practical shape and efficiency. One of the greatest perplexities of the government is to avoid receiving troops faster than it can provide for them. In a word, the people will serve their government, if the government itself will do its part only indifferently well.

REBEL THEORY OF SECESSION EXPOSED.
It might seem at first thought to be of little difference, whether the present movement at the South be called secession or rebellion. The movers, however, well understand the difference. At the beginning they knew they could never raise their treason to any respectable magnitude by the name which implied violation of law. They knew their people possessed as much moral sense, and as much devotion to law and order, and as much pride in and reverence for the history and government of their common country, as any other civilized and patriotic people. They knew they could make no advancement directly in the teeth of the strong and noble sentiment, accordingly they commenced by an insidious debauching of the public mind. They invented an injurious sophism, which, if conceded, was followed by perfectly logical steps through all the incidents to the complete destruction of the Union. The sophism itself is that any State of the Union may consistently with the national constitution, and therefore lawfully and peacefully withdraw from the Union without the consent of the Union or of any other State.

The little disguise that the supposed right is to be exercised only for just cause, themselves to be the sole judge of its justice, is too thin to merit any notice with rebellion. Thus sugar-coated, they have been dragging the public mind of their section for more than thirty years, and until at length they have brought many good men to a willingness to take up arms against the government the day after some assembly of men have enacted the farcical parody of taking their State out of the Union, who could have been brought to no such thing the day before.

The sophism derives much, perhaps the whole of its currency, from the assumption that there is some Omnipotent and Sacred Supremacy pertaining to a State, to each State of our Federal Union. Our States have neither more nor less power than that reserved to them in the Union by the Constitution, no one of them ever having been a State out of the Union. The original ones passed into the Union even before they cast off their British Colonial dependence; and the new ones came into the Union directly from a condition of dependence excepting Texas, and even Texas in its temporary independence was never designated a State. The new ones only took the designation of States on coming into the Union, while that name was first adopted for the old ones in and by the declaration of independence.

Therein the limited United Colonies were declared to be free and independent States, but even then the object plainly was not to declare their independence of one another, or of the Union, but directly the contrary, as their mutual pledges and their mutual action, before, at the time and afterwards, abundantly show. The express plighting of faith by each and all of the original thirteen in the articles of confederation, two years later, that the Union shall be perpetual, is most conclusive.

Having never been States either in substance or in name outside of the Union, whence this magical omnipotence of State rights, asserting a claim of power to lawfully destroy the Union itself? Much is said about the sovereignty of the States, but the word, even, is not in the national constitution, nor, as is believed, in any of the State constitutions. What is a sovereignty?

In the political sense of the term would it be far wrong to define it a political community without a political superior. Tested by this, no one of our States except Texas ever was a sovereignty; and Texas gave up the character on coming into the Union, by which act she acknowledged the constitution of the United States, and the laws and treaties of the United States, made in pursuance to the constitution to be for her the supreme law of the land.

The States have their status in the Union, and they have no other legislature. If they break from this, they can only do so against law and by revolution. The Union and not themselves separately procured their independence and their liberty; by conquest or purchase the Union gave each of them whatever independence and liberty it had.

INJUSTICE OF SECESSION.
The Union is older than any of the States, and in fact it created them as States. Originally some dependent Colonies made the Union, and in turn the Union threw off their old dependence for them and made them States, such as

Rates of Advertising:

Advertisements will be charged $1 per square of 10 lines, one or three insertions, and 25 cents for every subsequent insertion. Advertisements of less than 10 lines considered as a square. The subjoined rates will be charged for Quarterly, Half-Yearly and Yearly Advertisements:
	3 MONTHS.	6 MONTHS.	12 MONTHS.
Square, do.	$5.00	$8.00	$12.00
do. do.	7.00	9.50	13.00
do. do.	8.00	11.00	14.50
do. do.	15.00	20.00	30.00
Column, do.	25.00	35.00	50.00

Advertisements not having the number of insertions desired marked upon them, will be published until ordered out and charged accordingly.
Posters, Handbills, Bill-Heads, Letter-Heads and all kinds of Jobbing done in country establishments, executed neatly and promptly. Justices, Constables, and other BLANKS constantly on hand.

they are. None of them ever had a State constitution independent of the Union. Of course, it is not forgotten that all the new States framed their constitutions before they entered the Union, nevertheless dependent upon, and preparatory to, coming into the Union.

Unquestionably the States have the powers and rights reserved to them in and by the National Constitution; but among these surely are not included all conceivable powers however mischievous or destructive. But at most, such only as were known in the world at the time as governmental powers, and certainly a power to destroy the government itself, had never been known as a governmental or a merely administrative power. This relative matter national power and State rights, of a principle, is no other than the principle of generality and locality.

Whatever concerns the whole should be confided to the whole the general government; while whatever concerns only the State should be left exclusively to the State. This is all there is of original principle about it. Whether the national constitution, in defining the boundaries between the two, has applied the principle with exact accuracy, is not to be questioned. We are all bound by that definitely, without question. What is now combatted is the position that secession is consistent, while the constitution is lawful and peaceful.

It is not contended that there is any express law for it and nothing should ever be implied as law which leads to unjust or absurd consequences. The nation purchased with money the countries out of which several of these States were formed. Is it just that they shall go off without leave and without refunding? The nation paid very large sums, in the aggregate, I believe, nearly one hundred millions, to relieve Florida of the aboriginal tribes.

Is it just that she shall now be off without consent, or without making any return? The nation is now in debt for money applied to the benefit of these so-called seceded States, in common with the rest. Is it just that creditors shall go unpaid, or the remaining States pay the whole? A part of the present national debt was contracted to pay the old debts of Texas. Is it just that she shall leave and pay no part of this herself?

Again, if one State may secede, so may another; and when all shall have seceded none are left to pay the debts. Is this quite just to creditors? Did we not notify them of this same view of ours when we borrowed their money? If we now recognized this doctrine by allowing the seceders to go in peace, it is difficult to see what we can do if others choose to go, or to extort terms upon which they will promise to remain.

The seceders insist that our Constitution admits of secession; others have assumed to make a national Constitution of their own, in which necessity they have either discarded or retained the right of secession, as they insist it exists in ours. If they have discarded it, they thereby admit that on principle it ought not to be in ours. If they have retained it by their own construction of ours, they show that to be consistent they must secede from one another whenever they shall find it the easiest way of settling their debts, or effecting any other selfish or unjust object.

The principle itself is one of disintegration, and upon which no government can possibly endure. If all the States save one should assert the power to drive that one out of the Union, it is presumed the whole class of seceded politicians would at once deny the power and denounce the act, as the greatest outrage upon State rights. But suppose that precisely the same act, instead of being called driving the one out, should be called the seceding of the others from that one, it would be exactly what the seceders claim to do, unless indeed they make the point that the one, because it is a minority, may rightfully do what the others, because they are a majority, may not rightfully do. These politicians are settled and profound on the rights of minorities. They are not partial to that power which made the constitution, and speaks from the preamble, calling itself "We, the people."

It may well be questioned whether there is to-day a majority of the legally qualified voters of any State, except perhaps South Carolina, in favor of disunion. There is much reason to believe that the Union men are the majority in many, if not in every other one of the so-called seceded States. The contrary has not been demonstrated in any one of them. It is ventured to affirm this even of Virginia and Tennessee, for the result of an election held in military camps, where the bayonets are all on one side of the question voted upon, can scarcely be considered as demonstrating popular sentiments as such an election; all that large class who are at once for the Union and against coercion would be coerced to vote against the Union. It may be affirmed without extravagance that the free institutions we enjoy have developed the powers and improved the condition of our whole people beyond any example in the world, having a striking and impressive illustration.

THE GRAND ARMY.
So large an army as the government has now on foot was never before known, without a soldier in it but who had taken his place there of his own free choice. But more than this, there are many single regiments, whose members possess full practical knowledge of all the arts, sciences, professions and whatever else, whether useful or elegant, is known in the world. And there is scarcely one from which could not be selected a President, a Cabinet, a Congress, and perhaps a Court, abundantly competent to administer the government itself.

Nor do I say this is not true of the army of our late friends, now adversaries, in this contest. But if it is, so much better the reason why the government which has conferred such benefits on both them; and us, should not be broken up. Whoever, in any section, proposes to abandon such a government, would do well to consider in deference to what principle it is that he does it; what better he is likely to get in its stead.

Whether the substitute will give, or be in-
(Continued on fourth page.)