On the side of the Union it is a struggle for maintaining in the world that form and substance of government whose leading object is to elevate the condition of men, to lift artificial weights from all shoulders, to clear the paths of laudable pursuit for all. To afford all an unfettered start and a fair chance in the race of life. Yielding to partial and temporary departures, from necessity, that is the leading object of the government for whose existence we contend.

I am most happy to believe that the plain people understand and appreciate this. It is worthy of note that, while in this, the government's hour of trial, large numbers of those in the army and navy who bave been favored with the offices have resigned and proved false to the hand which had pampered them, not one common soldier or common sailor is known to have deserted his fing.

Great honor is due to those officers who remained true despite the example of their traitorous associates. But the greatest honor and the most important fact of all is the unanimous firmness of the common soldiers and common sailors. To the last man, so far as known, they have successfully resisted the traitorous efforts of those whose commands but an hour before they obeyed as absolute law. This is the patriotic instinct of plain people. They understand, without an argument, that destroying the government which was made by Wastlington means no good to them.

- THE OREAT EXPERIMENT. Our popular government has often been called an experiment. Two points in it our people have selled. The successful establishing and the successful administering of it.-One still remains: its successful maintenance against a formitable internal attempt to dver-throw it. It is now for them to demonstrate to the world that those who can fairly carry an election can a p suppress a rebellion. The ballots are the i thtful and peaceful successors of bullets, and that when ballots are fairly and constitutionally decided, there can be no successful appeal back to bullets. There can be no successful appeal, except to ballots themselves at succeeding elections. Such will be a great lesson of peace, teaching men that what they cannot take by an election, neither can they take it by war; teaching all the folly of being the beginners of the war.

NO COMPROMISE, WITH TRAITORS. Lest there be esque uneasiness on the minds of candid men as to what is to be the course of the government toward the Southern States after the rebellion shall have been suppressed. the Executive deems it proper to say, it will be his purpose then, as ever, to be guided by the Constitution and the laws; and that he probably will have no different understanding of the powers and duties of the Federal government relatively to the rights of the States and the people under the Constitution, than that expressed in the inaugural address. He delires to preserve the government that it may be administered for all as it was administered by the men who made it.

Loyal citizens everywhere have the right to claim this of their government, and the govern-ment has no right to withhold or neglect it. It is not perceived that in giving it there is any coercion, any conquest, or any subjugation, in any just sense of those terms.

The constitution provides, that all the States have accepted the provision, that the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union "a republican form of government."

But if a State in this Union may lawfully go but of the Union, having done so, it may also discard the republican form of government, so that to prevent its going out is an indispensable means to the 'nd of maintaining the guarantee mentioned ; and when an end is lawful and obligatory, the indispensable means to it are also lawful and obligatory.

It was with the deepest regret that the Executive found the duty of employing the war power in defence of the government forced upon him. He could but perform his duty, or surrender the existence of the government.

No compromise by public sentiment could in this case be a cause. Not that compromises are not often proper, but that no popular government can long survive a marked precedent that those who carry an election can only save the government from immediate destruction by giving up the main point upon which the people gave the election.

The people, themselves, and not their ser vants, can safely reverse their own deliberate decisions.

As a private citizen, the Executive could not have consented that these institutions shall perish. Much less could he, in betrayal of so vast and so sacred a trust as these free people had confided to him. He felt that he had no moral right to shrink, nor even to count the chances of his own life in what might follow. In full view of his great responsibility he has so far done what he has deemed his duty. You will now, according to your own judgment, perform yours. He sincerely hopes that your views and your action may so accord with his as to assure all faithful citizens who have been disturbed in their rights of a certain and speedy restoration to them under the constitution and

And having thus chosen our course without guile and with pure purpose, let us renew our trust in God, and to forward without fear and with manly hear?

July 4, 1861. ABRAHAM LINCOLN. A Plous Response.—It was some time ago that Gen. McClellan, who is a religious and conscientious man ha well as able general, telegraphed to the War Department for leave for his soldiers to apply some boards and other refuse lumber lying about the encampment (and helonging to the government) to the building of a church for the regiments to worship in. A militia general would have taken the lumber for this or any other public purpose, without leave asked. Not so the strictly-bred soldier McClellan. But when the Secretary was asked by the clerk in what terms he should answer the dispatch, he gave a Caledonian wink, and said : "The Lad's will be done !"-New Fork
